27427	12	Esmeralda	MARY'S BICYCLE RENTALS	Thanks a lot. That is exactly what we are looking for. You can buy plenty of fresh herbs at the mercado any day of the week. Huge bunches of them for ridiculously cheap prices. i have never spent much time except in the areas around the bus stations but i have watched it grow over the years from a seedy little port to a rather active growing cosmo place with many new businesses and restaurants. there are beaches west on the costera back towards puerto. to the south it is bad road and swamp. the wind around this area is amazing. one of the windiest constantly flowing from sea to sea over the land divide. i have stayed in jachitan in a ok place in the town. highway crossroad. trucks. buses. easy to go the wrong way out of here. they have a new puerto in the germinal stage developing around san the mercado is full of all these and many you have never seen before, and cheap if you can bargain. some of the ladies get their jollies ripping off tourists; some give good deals if they think you are a potential repeat customer. the to surf puerto you have to stay in shape and the pool at the holiday inn is my savior. most of the ladies have disapeeared due to cold water but my trust vest that i use on cool mornings in puerto does the job. i am thinking about the take off drop everytime i do a snap up. there is a lot of thinking time. i alway think of getting cleaned up inpuerto on my last laps. today is the day at mundaka. 6' and offshore. what will it be doing in 2 weeks? stay tuned. the water is fairly warm. 27609	6	house owner	Re: Place to Stay	Julie I think you said you were staying at the Pasada Real. Down at the beach there they have a Beach Club. It is pretty nice. That would be a good place for a sunset. Also on the grounds up on top where the actual hotel is is pretty nice. You would do just fine to stay there. Also on Zicatela at one of the places on the beach like Aquario that Imago wrote about or maybe Tios with a beer or down at He doesn't want a gringo bricklayer, he said that he was looking for a Canadian bricklayer. 27610	5	michaelp	Re: Tehautepec & Juchitan	I'm hesitant to post this, as so many people love Brad's BBQ, and the one time we ate there at the old place in the hotel in Bococho some years back the steaks were good. However, a few years back when his place was at the old Cabo Blanco on Zicatela, I hesitated at the entrance while deciding on going in. The grill was right by the sidewalk at that time. One of the waitresses said that a customer was asking about his food. His response was basically " Those a--holes will get what I want to give them when I'm good and ready to give it to them." Could have been a bad night, or someone he didn't like. Don't know and don't care, but decided not to eat there that night. I didn't like the response and Does anyone have a rental property in Melaque or Barra for sale. I think I can rent a nice two bedroom for about $5,000 peso a month if I work hard at it. Easier if it has a view of the sea and a pool. After taxes on the income I should be able to get about $50,000 pesos a year. I might have to charge a lot more for the high season months as most properties appear to be vacant for 8 or 9 months of the year. I calculate that expenses for taxes, power, gas, fumigations, occasional cleaning when vacant, security, management, repairs and maintenance should not exceed about $35,000 pesos a year if I am careful. That leaves a net income of $15,000 pesos a year. As I need to get at least a 5%	2300

				If you have the time, I would suggest staying over-night. We have done it before in one day, but it gets to be a long day, especially if you stop along the way at the brick-making place; salt flats; Cuyutlan; and a coconut stand. I feel a lot of road time can spoil a fun outing or adventure in a hurry. We are headed to Comala in Feb. and doing the above mention activities including spending the rest of the afternoon at a botanero. We are staying at Casa Alvarada for one night. We will venture out to Colima for dinner. The next day our tour will include Chaz,I've eaten at Brads many times and the food is great and portions are huge. Brads always been polite and friendly to me and other customers when I've dine there. I think you probably hit his place on a rare bad night. Re: How to call a cell phone via Skype from Canada My God Girl...you're faster than a speeding bullet! Should we call you Super Nan!?!?! Forum • Foro: Barra de With the numbers being released now to the sea each year we are catching up on a population that has been decimated over the years. I have books in the office showing that the entire section of the coast where the camp is was once known worldwide as a major nesting site for the Olive Ridley. It was up there on a scale with the famous beaches of Oaxaca. The poaching of not just the eggs but also the taking of adult turtles in huge numbers (see the picture below from Playon de Mismaloya) caused a near extinction locally of most species. In the first year the cooperative where we help out started they only collected 19 nests. Yet the older members talk of times when you could walk 2km if you wanted to Hey Chaz I'm reading your post and you said it loud... The site, near the Pacific coastal city of Chiclayo, probably dates to the Wari culture which ruled the Andes of modern Peru between the 7th and 12th Century. The once buried city showed evidence of human sacrifice. The remains of the victims were thrown over the nearby cliff, Cesar Soriano, the chief archaeologist on the project, told the Andina news agency. 				Just for you Howard, I have a feeling that you always have your camera with you. 1. It's probably best to be your own "accident investigator" and take pictures immediately after calling your insurance rep. 2. All accidents will be settled, if possible, on the scene. 3. There are no easy answers but knowledge of the language and patience are the best prerequisites if you do not follow Zummie's advice and use public transportation. 4. You also might want to keep in mind that even if the other party does not have insurance, they do not necessarily want to lose their vehicle nor go to jail. 5. Recheck your insurer's ability to show up on the scene were ever you might be driving. For those that lurk here	1211

				During the debates, Obama and Clinton agreed about NAFTA's flaws: Clinton: "It is not enough just to criticize Nafta, which I have, and for some years now. I have put forth a very specific plan about what I would do. And it does include telling Canada and Mexico that we will opt out, unless we renegotiate the core labor and environmental standards. Not side agreements, but core agreements. That we will enhance the enforcement mechanism... and we're going to take out the ability of foreign companies to sue us because of what we do to protect our workers." Russert: "Let me button this up. Absent the change that you are suggesting, you are willing opt out of NAFTA in six months?" 				The National Commission on Minimum Wage will raise the top rate minimum wage by 4.6 percent to 54.80 pesos ($4.18) a day on Thursday. Lower minimum wage rates of 53.26 pesos and 51.95 pesos apply in some areas of Mexico. The Association of Mexican Human Resource Professionals said it was stunned that the wage increase had come in so far below inflation, which was 6.23 percent in the 12 months ending on Nov. 30, according to statistics published by the Banco de México. Approximately 5 percent of Mexican workers receive minimum wage,

It is also often used to set traffic fines and other government fees. The México City minimum daily wage for 2009 will be 54.8 pesos -- that's up 4.6 percent for inflation. The actual inflation rate for Mexico is more than 6%. (US Social Security checks will go up 5.8% in 2009, with no increase in the charge for Medicare Part B.) The FM3 requirement will be 250 times $54.80, or $13,700 pesos. At an exchange rate of 13:1, that converts to US$1,053 per month required for an FM3. The FM2 requirement will	2443

28241	12	K2casa	Random Thoughts from Mi Ca	mankind faces a crossroads. One path leads to despair and utter hopelessness. Last night, my wife and I were the happiest couple in Melaque. Delivered to our door, fresh from the ocean, were two large lobsters, split and grilled, topped with garlic shrimp and accompanied by a platter of rice and vegetables, and a loaf of grilled bread. King David had arrived with food that made us positively euphoric. David and his wife are the proprietors of Abbarotes el Fish, a deceptively tiny establishment on the first block of Abel Salgado, right across the street from Bungalows Orientales and just before you turn right to Villas Camino del Mar. Out of this little space come platters of gorgeous shrimp, cooked just about any way you want: al aijo, el diablo, a la Mexicana, or con tequila. All are served with Dec. 22: Batman The Dark Knight (Action/Adventure 2008) Batman raises the stakes in his war on crime. With the help of Lieutenant Jim Gordon and District Attorney Harvey Dent, Batman sets out to dismantle the remaining criminal organizations that plague the city streets. The partnership proves to be effective, but they soon find themselves prey to a reign of chaos unleashed by a rising criminal mastermind known to the terrified citizens of Gotham as The Joker. 				Bright and sunny with medium waves. More tourists in town with over half of zacatela's new paving being used for auto traffic. We went to the waterfall or cascada up in la reforma, only 22 miles from Puerto. But the drive was slightly under two hours through beautiful mountains and valleys. Dirt road for over half way but the road was in great condition for a Mexico dirt road. The falls are about 100 feet high and pretty impressive. A small circular area has the cascade pouring down, it was very breezy and the spray was cold, a nice contrast after the 20 minute hike from the parking area. The water feels like it comes off of a glacier, I didn't have a thermometer but it felt about 50. Anyone out there with good driving Just a quick note for those in the process of learning the use of the subjunctive, which is a very cool conjugation used for denoting things that haven't yet happened, or the future of which is unsure. It's also used in the formal imperative as well as in conditional if/then clauses. Learning to use 'el subjuntivo' involves the following: 1) First, get a feel for the basic subjunctive conjugation. It can be a little tricky at first (-ar verbs behaving like -er verbs, -er verbs behaving like -ar verbs), but with time it becomes easier. Example: puedo becomes pueda, llego becomes llegue, vuelves becomes vuelvas, vengo becomes venga, hablamos becomes hablemos, etc. 2) Learn which I dialed country code 011 52 and than the cell operator said I should dial 1 after the 52 than operators come on call can't be completed as dialed. cj January 22, 23 & 24, 2009. 28349	12	billgilbert	Re: notary public	An even cooler form of the subjunctive is when you utilize the present perfect subjunctive form. To do this, take your basic present perfect (he, has, hemos, etc.) and simply modify the 'haber' portion of the structure (haya, hayas, hayamos, etc.). Pretty simple. Example: 'He regresado' (I went to the store but now 'I have returned') is a simple declarative expression. But if you're referring to all those things you'll do when you get back from the store (or after downing a few beers at the store), you'll need to use the subjunctive form, which in this case would be 'haya regresado'. Example: 'After I have returned' requires the subjunctive form since it is reflective of the unknown future (hell, who knows if Thanks everyone for making movie night a great success! 				From Daily Kos Some in the media had a field day with a report by a gossip columnist claiming that Rahm Emanuel spoke to Blago and his staff on 21 separate occasions (Of course Hannity ran with it and made it 21 HOURS of conversation (does anybody take this fool seriously?)) about filling Barack Obama's senate seat, and that each conversation was recorded by FBI wiretaps. Only one problem: the report was the work of fantasy, fit for a Grisham or Turow novel, but not for the airwaves. As it turns out, Rahm only spoke to Blago once, and it didn't focus on the Senate seat. He spoke to Blago's Chief of Staff four times, and in those conversations did nothing improper.

				Usually a $40us cab fare from the airport into the bay area. once in the bay area cab fares are really cheap to anywhere, around 30pesos. You can get to many of the beaches, maguey, entrega, arrocitto, conejos, bocana and other beaches very reasonable. Santa cruz is a nice area to stay, you are very accessible to the beach at santa cruz, markets and tour companies. Close to the marina to do bay tours or fishing. All within walking distance from anywhere in santa cruz. The best western is also very close and it would be pretty central also. It is close to the large supermarket and also many restaurants. If those people HAD consumed that much alcohol, wouldn't that put their blood level (assuming of course that the drinks were 1.5 oz or more and were NOT watered down) at a toxic/poisonous state? Last January on a weekday afternoon, I went up to Pipers because I love their view and when their sound system is working they get many satellite music channels. I had been there a couple times before at night and had had a few beers and/or tequilas, but I paid for each as I drank them so never had a tab. The prices were in line with other places in town, 20 pesos for a beer and 50 or so for a big shot of tequila, 30 or so for a shot of brandy, depending on which brand of course. When I went in that weekday afternoon, I asked the young bartender who introduced himself as "George", who was 16 years old and looked younger, to run me a tab on shots of tequila. I picked out an anejo, I ls it possible that the second bill of $2740 was the whole bill and that the $2000 was never credited? Was it the same employee both times that presented them the bill? A total bill of $2740 ($210US) or about $550 ($42US) each makes a lot Uh, isn't that pretty much what I said, Wayne? Different rates to Chahue- Thanks for giving me all this detailed info! We are still listening to everyone's advice & weighing our options. Between this & the Huatulco forum, we've gotten a lot of conflicting info: Some say Mexicana/Click nor Continental fly animals into Huatulco....one suggested InterJet into Huatulco might even be free....we've heard that Continental takes great care of animals to DF. And then there're the cautionary tales....&, as I said, they did almost put her on the wrong flight a few yrs ago in Monterrey. Like everyone else who travels w/ their animals, our dog is as precious to us as a child, so we're thinking long & hard about what we will do. We're considering flying into Huatulco, flying into Pto, flying into DF & driving Who would have paid that much no matter what they said. 1/2 the price is admitting that one has made a mistake is difficult anywhere...and northern marketing seems to have an attitude that it's worth keeping a customer, no matter how far outta whack their complaint. in mexico, customer service runs up against a seeming inability to admit making a mistake... for a local to admit to a mistake in this community is a rare event...and i'll hold to my assertion. it probably has history in the danger of admitting wrong or mistake in years I had a very similar experience years ago at Club Elite II in Panama City, Panama. I was there with my brother and we had about 3 scotches each the whole night BUT the 2 b-girls that sat down at our table were drinking like fish while they engaged in stimulating conversation. At then end of about 3 hours the tab came and it was for almost $300.00 U.S. dollars. Although the tab did also Interesting story. Can you scan and post the receipt please? 28585	12	billgilbert	Re: On behalf of a friend Jeff	The last time there was a complaint here about a local service there was a threat of legal action. And that was the end of that complaint. Well here we go again, we spent the last two weeks in Huatulco. The tour operators are telling tourists not to trust the locals !!!!!!!!!!!!!!! This was really bad a few years back, we all know that Signature, Apple Vacations and the other companies get commission on the trips they sell. We know they cannot be responsible for trips tourists book elsewhere. We challenged representatives of these companies in Huatulco that telling this 'tale' to tourists was not a nice thing to do..., of course "I never said that , we only say... bla bla bla"... was the reply, while a family of four that had just been told 2 hours prior are standing with us.	80

Ricky Had a nice drive to Roca Blanca yesterday, a very pleasant beach about 30 km north of PE off of Hw 200. It was semi crowded but still wonderful. We ate at Lulu's, about the 1st business on the little strip. Excellent food and service. The water was very clear, the surf small and Paula and Wendy kyacked while I swam. About 70 meters out I ran into stinging yelly fish or mal aguas and ended up swimming laps just off shore. A featureless sand bottom and good visibility made it a bit like swimming laps in a swimming pool. I did see a few small fish I have 2 friends coming down on Feb 19 to Mar 3. It's still more spontaneous in MX, more of an art, I find. Can't always predict what will happen. The only way i'd be leery of laying the blame for cold food on the server is if the kitchen puts the food up too soon and the order takes a while to complete. then again, it's their job to see the food has been too long and question it. I normally leave a larger tip for an attractive waitress just because I'm a guy - but in MX the majority of servers are still men so I pocket this difference. 				Apparently this year there has been a major shift in tipping in our beloved area. The joke is; "What's the difference between a Canadian(or insert Republican) and a canoe? Canoes tip". Sincere apologies to all Canadians. In the past I have always heard that tips in Barra (more Americans than Canadians?)were higher for service people & musicians than in Melaque (more Canadians than Americans?). This year I'm hearing that tips in Melaque are much higher than in Barra even though tourists are flocking to both towns and the restaurants & bars are full. Obviously the US economy has a direct effect on this. One of us went over to tell the waiter what we ordered to correct the bill. He referred us to the teller. Seems we got no where as the teller is Piper's daughter. A while back, you recommended two books that really were great reads: Enchanted Vagabonds and Search for the Lost World by Dana Lamb. True story about a young couple in the 30s that build a combo kayak/surfboard/canoe and sail down the Pacific coast of Mexico. They stop in Puerto and eventually go through the Panama Canal. So I would definitely recommend those books to anyone looking for something different and Just mooched a fabulous book from a friend: "There's a Word for it in Mexico". The author is Boye Lafayette De Mente. It's billed as 'The Complete Guide to Mexican Thought and Culture'. It starts as a brief history of this incredible country, and its various oppressors. After that, popular words and phrases are detailed in an easy format of one or two pages, that show great insight into their often complex meanings in Mexico. For those of us that spend extended time here, this guide is essential to keeping your sanity when our culture bangs up against theirs. (a daily occurrence?) As wonderful as these folks are, this book gives you an invaluable peek into the whys' and wherefores' of their daily lives, I am very interested in your cooking classes. When is the next class? I also need a better description of the location - street address maybe. I don't know Happy New Year Karen and Randy!! Hope your trip over to Vancouver is uneventful. We have about 10 cm new snow here where we are on Van Is.and it is still coming down. Have a great time in Melaque. An adventure type of book is "Enchanted Vagabonds" by Dana Lamb. Its about a man and wife who built a small sailboat/canoe and took it from San Diego to Guatemala. It takes place in the 1930s. It is really well written and very interesting and describes different spots along the coast and the trial and tribulations they went through.One of the good great new years eve party last night at rickys! that baked ham was excellent! this is the first time i've had baked ham in mexico and i'll be coming back for more! and the service was great too! ricky, your show last night was outstanding! 28772	12 Luna	Re: Books	A very interesting book to read if you read Spanish is: HISTORIA DE LA SEXUALIDAD EN MEXICO published by Grijalbo a few months ago(2008), the author is Josè Luis Trueba Lara. The authors who is also a journalist takes a look at the sexuality of Mexicans beginning with precolonial times right up to our times. He talks about tabues,and myths related to sexuality of Mexicans. He also discussees what love and what is erotism were in each historical era. I don't know if it has been translated into any language yet, it is easy read as the author narrates in a clear, precise manner, almost documenting what he has researched. You can buy it at any of the Ghandi book stores but also I beleive it Claudio is still on permanent vacation (even though Dan insists he's just visiting Italy -- it's "bad for business" to entertain any alternative) and isn't expected back	308

				As a merchant I can say that honest merchants DO NOT look upon their customers as "pray". Good merchants know that being honest and leaving a customer with the knowledge that they received a good value for their money is the only path to long term prosperity. On this thread we now have two customer's accounts of how they were ripped off. It appears hotels are cheaper than Barra, we want a pool, Dryhouse, you are right it is a different world there. At my business I take my total yearly advertising budget and divide it by the number of customers I have each year so I can tell you exactly what it costs me to get each customer through the door. I can tell you the average spent by every customer and I can tell you exactly how many customers we saw and closed for any day we were open for the last 10 years. We have a standardized training program on DVDs with skill check lists that must be completed by each employee trainee. We emphasize that our goal is not to sell the customer that came through the door but instead to wow them to such an extent that they will become the stores Back to the Complete Guide to Mexican Thought and Culture... 28847	12	Pam	hotel Puerto Vallarta	It's good to hear that your not leaving a part of your family behind,way to go ... You started a good thread Puerto Bill. And you are correct, the Puerto Escondido and Huatulco pages are a bit much for the quiet folk of Melaque. You wanted "Something to read while soaking rays on the beach or laying in bed after walking through the mercado ...Also travel books about how to get to Barra de Navidad - Melaque or what to do once you get there." When I read fiction I prefer nice stories with happy endings. Sue Graffton's series starting with "A is for Alibi" is a great example. They are in my preferred category of "trashy novels" which I have enjoyed so much over the years - most things by Ludlom, Clancy, Sheldon etc etc. too many to enumerate. 			The airport is on the far north side of La Varta where there are few hotels in the less expensive side of the spectrum other than the "no tell" at the end of the runway or delving into Xtapa behind Home Despot. On the other hand, the Roger that Howard suggested on the far south side gets an all around thumbs up but then that would be a long taxi/bus ride to and from the airport in both directions covering the same nightmare of traffic unless you wanna catch the local Melaque bus on the south side which leaves, I think, right around the Here is a link again to my bus catching information. The stop in old town at Aguacate and Carranza streets is good if you are traveling light but based on my personal experience, if dragging and carrying a lot of luggage the bus station (central camionera) is way way way easier to maneuver in. Bus shedules, and Puerto Vallarta airport????

			"Pay attention to how much money they're charging you for ANYTHING while traveling ANYWHERE!" Right! I'm presently on my way to Melaque, driving from central BC. Gassed up in Ontario,OR, and the car wouldn't start. Got towed to the ford dealership here in Ontario where they replaced the fuel pump in 2 hrs while I waited. The charge was 5 hrs of labour at $82.00 per hr.$US 410.00 for 2 hrs labour!!.
28874	12 Sandy L	Re: On behalf of a friend Jeff	The justification was that the 'book' allows 4.7 hrs for the job but we Just finished Luis Alberto Urrea's [i]The Hummingbird's Daughter[/i] good read, beautiful prose, insightful as to aspects of Mexican culture that prevail to this day. I must be honest and say that I liked Urrea's [i]The Devil's Highway[/i] more than this book but both are very different with respect to style. [i]Hummingbird[/i] was just a tad too fanciful for me whereas [i]Highway[/i] is basically a documentary. Rumor has it that [i]Hummingbird[/i] is based on fact too - with a lot of mystical magical stuff thrown in to make for good storytelling I suspect. Also just finished [i]Stolen Innocence: My Story of Growing Up in a Polygamous Sect, Becoming a Teenage Bride, and Breaking Free of Warren Jeffs[/i] by Boy, have we got stories about the Mexico City Airport. One trip I had broken my ankle 6 days before and was in a fracture boot, trying to run through the MC airport to catch the flight to Puerto. Hubby ran ahead of us, got to the booth out of breath, begging them to hold flight til I got there. He was told "Senior, don't worry...be happy !". Departure to Puerto was delayed an hour. Most times we have made connections just fine. Once missed connection to Oaxaca by seconds and were accomodated by airline at the hotel at the airport, dinner and breakfast the next am and upgraded to first class flight the next day. Last trip our flight was delayed, departure gate not posted until about 15 minutes before over the years I have enjoyed reading novels by Guy Gavriel Kay (fantasy), Kathy Reichs (forensic anthropology), Joanne Harris and have re-read the Happy New Year to all!! I'm curious to hear if Julie or any other visitors had problems with customs while bringing donations. Regards, Dan	67
28875	12 Nan	Re: Books	We just returned from another fantastic trip to Melaque. I can't believe we've spent so many Christmas' in one place, but Melaque just keeps calling us back. However, it really is time to expand our horizons and try some place new. We love to fish, boogie board. What other destination would you recommend? I could do w/o some of the "adventure" involved in flying these days. Have you checked airline "on-time" statistics lately? I don't think flight times ANYWHERE are set in stone any more. It's not unusual now days for a plane to leave early if they can get everyone seated quickly. Conversely, we frequently sit on the tarmac for up to an hour owing to some lame excuse. On our most recent return trip from Mexico we were two hours late getting into LA (the plane coming from LA had mechanical problems), & missed the last connecting flight out. Of course the next day's flights were all booked except for the sun rise special for which we had to get up at 4:00 AM. The year before we sat in LA for 5 hours before SWEET loss, Alabama! 				Flying is not what it use to be. That is for sure. Remember when they actually liked you? When they treated you like people and not cattle? I drive to Puerto and it is a huge hassle but the flight might be worse. Of course if I only had a week or two there is no choice at all except to fly. Actually driving is a lot more hassle but at the same time it is kind of nice. Maybe I'm just an idiot. No argument from my wife there, that's for sure. And what is up with the Mexico City airport. Why the hell can't they get the flights posted in a timely manner? It just seems so basic. Just post the time and place the flight leaves. I wondered what #3 would be, not that I'm superstitious! Well last night on my way home I tripped and knew immediately this was not good. My arm was hanging with no movement and much pain. Before I go any further I will tell you I only had 2 drinks! I ran back to Ricky's where they were closing up. Ricky and his staff took immediate action and got me to the free clinic. there they said I had to go to Manzanillo asap. Special thanks to Elizabeth who works at Ricky's,who got a taxi for me (that's another story on it's own!)and accompanied me along with her i would like to say thanks to everybody that tried very hard to help my dad(Jeff O'Connor) on dec 31. And a special thanks to Palos and Nan who have been helping us with everything. Nan we much appreciated you came and got us not knowing if we were still there or not. And Palos thanks for helping my mom with the translating and everything. And Paco thanks for everything you helped with. I can answer my own question. As another poster said, the immigration booth in the new terminal is very easy to find. You will see it on the right after you clear security (same for all airlines), but before entering the gates area. Hard to miss. AT&T cellular works in Puerto (w/ their international plan). We just have our calls to our land line in the US forwarded. Vorizon does not work in Puerto (despite what their website may say). Does work in Mexico City, may work in Oaxaca. Many areas are cleaned out by the oyster divers but below those depths its really nice. Off the lighthouse you can see a group of fishing boats out about a quarter mile. This is the "factory" its a nice pinnacle that gets pretty deep and some really huge grouper. On the reefs in front of Puerto Angelito and Carrizalillo are some reefs. Both are good dives and visibility on a good day can be 50 feet easy. I found a giant clam about two and a half feet wide...alive. Lots of live reef also. I only recommend diving in the summer as currents can get strong, the dropoff only a couple miles out is about 10,000 plus. I have only hit 100-130 at either I use propane for the barbecue as a heat source/back-up. A Skidoo is towing surfers out and I've seen some pretty nice rides. However when the waves breakover, it turns into a swirling torrent of water, boiling and churning around. I saw the jetski pickup one guy who'd fallen and it took them awhile to get back out to sea battling the waves. It was only moderately crowded on the adaquin this morning when we ate breakfast. The principal beach was crowded with happy touristes and vendors selling all kinds of foods and snacks. Our friend Wendy beparts back to the Kindle sells for US$359.00 on Amazon.com. 				I just had to tell you all about the great meal we had here in Huatulco last night.....We were recommended a place off the beaten track, but well worth the little drive to find it. It is called "Chuy Restaurante", and no it is not all chinese food. Great sushi and also mexican food and also the proverbial hamburger. However four of us went to this hole in the wall and ordered sweet & sour shrimp, sweet and sour chicken, chow mein, chop suey and rice. There was actually 6 huge platters of food, so much we took home enough for another meal tonight!!!!!! The cost 350 pesos for 4 of us. Absolutely delicious, no MSG, great sauces. Ok now to tell you how to find this place..... Follow the road We don't need more from Jarhead, so much as we need more Jarhead types.

Just a thought....if people are concerned about paying extra or not getting stuff through customs (both of which are certainly unfortunate possibilities) why not just spend the money in Mexico? 29050	13	buzzardwest	Re: LOOKING FOR REPUTABLE	I've come to Huatulco with obviously new goods meant for charity a few times and never had a problem. These have included cases of toothpaste and toothbrushes, sports equipment, art materials and books. I pack the goods in suitcases and include a brief explanatory note in both English and Spanish in each bag. I tend to travel light personally, so I haven't had problems with going over the weight limit. This Christmas I brought down some extra supplies, including a box of crayons the size of a small suitcase. The only problem I encountered was that when my large suitcase containing the crate of crayons with a few clothes packed around it went through the x-ray machine in Huatulco the security guard couldn't figure out what he was seeing on the screen and Well - 1st half of the winter season has come and gone and the next few months bring the best of events for planning dinners and nights of celebration. 29051	12	K2casa	Salsa Jack is Back!!- Mi Casa	Where do I sign up??? Ha ha for now its just a dream.... Lots of good reasons to leave the cold climate I can relate. Living in Canada's cold capital, I have been fortunate to travel to PE for the past 2 years to get away from this stinking minus bone-chilling weather. Travelling to PE is not only an escape for a heat break but its also a unique surf-side town that cannot be compared to your typical beach holiday and the fact that no all-inclusive resorts exists make it even more special. From my cold perspective, when the temp here plummets to -15 without wind-chill, you don't really care what it feels like with it - it just plain hurts!!	2635

				I personally enjoy reading Jarhead's Trip Report. So what if he isn't covering major daily PE events, he doesn't come across as a reporter! His entry title does read Trip Report and not PE Headline Reporter. Sorry but I think there are other entries here that cover other content when applicable. For people who travel to PE each year and look forward to returning, its nice to hear the basics of daily life in PE from someone who is there living it. This is a forum and there aren't I'm on the hunt for a couple of cheap bikes. No luck in the Barrio or Cihuatlan.	413
29060	5	mimischmidt	Re: Jarhead's Trip Report Par	Doesn't have to be nice looking, actually i would prefer "beaters". Not interested Hi Dan, last time we came down the only real problem was the cardboard box. So My helpful hint would be try to pack in suit cases instead. It seems like they really are skeptical of the boxes. We able to to get everything passed, but just a few more minutes of delay. We brought down books for the kids that we donated Well Let see about a property that only Spanish has: Gender of nouns, adjectives and articles... Just in case you don't remember grammar 101 A noun is a person, place or thing an adjective is a word that describes a noun an article is the word that introduces a sentence (in easy words) SO let's get to the point If the nature of nouns could be understood ?? for example Let's say the word DRESS -It is a piece of garment worn by woman you would imagine it is a feminine NOUN in Spanish well..Wrong the word for dress is VESTIDO it is a masculine noun because it ends in ``O`` Nouns that end in ``O`` are usually masculine. One more example to illustrate what I want to say.. TIE it is worn by I forgot to mention that people that were on the class (11) voted for pozole and most of them did not like pork meat..We are trying to please everybody so if you have a personal request post it here..Please no snake stew kinda stuff..ONLY real mexican cuisine.Make your request and we will try to please you..Besides There's bicycle repair shop that will swing you a cheap deal on a functional bike in Melaque. It's across the street from Cenaduria Leonora's, which is on the street that heads east from the far side of the square. Got it? It's about 5 blocks east (towards Barra) from the square. Now, the bikes are very used, but work The people that came to the cooking class(11) voted they wanted to learn how to make Pozole but some of them did not want pork meat..so we decided to have chicken instead,..Come and join us next saturday at 11.30 in Jaluco after the gas station , next to the nursery on the left hand side..For further info contact If you don't like this thread, don't read it. Simple as that. Personally, I like Jarhead's trip reports. They remind me of fun times in PE and other parts of Mexico. It's especially nice to read them when I'm freezing my a$$ off here in the Hot, breezy and wild surf this afternoon in Puerto. Somehow my morning report vanished today, pretty much the same as other days lately except that alot of the tourist hords have left. Swam at Manzanilla this afternoon, not too crowded, no jellyfish, but visibility was moderate to poor and the water seemed cooler. Talked with Dennis and Debbie Miller and Dennis commented that the water was cooler also. Lots of pelicans flying in formation today, I saw one group of 50 fly over Arco Iris this morning. Not much flying action in Puerto today, the Otter hadn't been up that I've seen. I saw some low wing single taking off from the aeroport this morning, had tip tanks but I couldn't tell if it was a Bonanza or a Navion Eagle Developers is a new up comming group of local trades men. Maybe Tom needs to add a "Business Only - Advertise your business HERE" section (mainly the Melaque forum) Public events, like the Ballet Xalixco, fundraisers, etc should be encouraged to post on the regular Melaque forum, as those events will benefit the community, but anything relating to promoting someones business adventures could have a separate section (see: Spark's website, www.mexconnect.com , etc). Don't remove your business signature, Nan - you mostly post relevant answers to questions asked, as does Dan..... That was just a suggestion..... Roberto another nan... a very interesting question...you are absolutely correct in that the folk who are advertising a lot here are posting multiple threads on a daily basis and anything, including their own, is gone below the page in a heartbeat. you have served the community by being 'nan landers' of info while you advertise open seats on your fishing tours...and your approach, may it be both personal to the folks you meet as customers and businesswise,...seems a nice fit... dan and ruth do pretty much the same...dan contributes a bunch...ruth worries he might jump in too deep... the la manzanilla board (the blue one) has a policy of asking eateries and tour outfits and others to limit to one ad per week, and it looks like I for one love the advertising. How else would you find out about a new restaurant or a special service. There are no English newspapers so boards like this one get the word out. 				Itching for some inertia, try this: find a relaxing spot to spend a few hours; could be under a palapa on the beach, a restaurant, a boat, doesn't matter. Just relax and become one with whatever you are seated on...remain seated, take in sun and beer in equal amounts, get sweaty and lethargic, notice things have blurred edges, like in a dream all physical entities are losing their finite nature... drink more beer, watch things move or stay still, get hotter, move to shade, drink more beer. Take a photo, but only if your camera is at arms reach. Fall asleep for a half hour and wake hour thirsty needing a beer. Shuffle to your meal, slowly and half corked. Notice the chair marks on your ass and laugh. Sit in restaurant. Phone no. is 315 106 91 55. Best to go in at 10 min to the hour and book a time. She gives 8 massages for 1,500 pesos on a prepain card. In the next few weeks she has a special -8 one hour massages for 1,000 pesos when you buy a prepaid card. You can share the card with others, Cary, You hit the nail on the head when you said "I finally don't have to pretend that I'm a Canadians when I'm in Mexico." My husband and I were on the beach in October and got verbally abused for being Americans. Good old G.W. I told him that from now on we would say we were Canadians. Do you know if the

For heaven's sake warn me next time guys! I hate Tracking the elusive dorado. We had three boats out on fishing charter yesterday Jan 8. All left early at 7:00 am, went way out and fished from 15 to 22 or 24 miles where we have been bringing them in; five dorado on Dec 27 and six dorado Dec 31 and a few here and there since then, but yesterday - nothing. Not a fish (so now you now know this is not advertising). Pelos had a Tenacatita snorkel trip in a panga yesterday too, left at about 9 am by the time they got the snorkel gear together. Snorkeled, did the jungle tour, spent time at the beach and returned about 4:30 or 5:00 pm. There is another legend that goes like this..It is said That a treasure of a million dollars in gold is found where a ship called ``Golden Doors`` sank..This accident occurred in July 24th 1862, when the ship was burning and was trying to get to land..It happened near where Marabasco river meets the ocean..Many have tried to rescue the treasure and It is also believed that some of the rich people from the area got their fortune from this treasure..The legend That is what I meant..	82

				I did it in a couple hours in Huatulco (La Crucicita) last year. You won't be the first jumping these hoops. It's a snap. 1. Get the driver license medical physical form from the DMV. 2. Go next door to the Red Cross for a blood type test and a three question MD physical, total cost $100 pesos, time 45 minutes. Your blood type is noted on the license, reason for that information. 3. Return to DMV with signed physical form in hand, show your proof of residence, (phone or electric, or water bill) your US/Canadian drivers license (an expired one will work), pay the man in cash. (I paid $500 for two years) Tell him you have been driving for 30 years or more, two million kilometers, 'mucho experiencia manejando'. 4. Bring There was a post on the PE forum suggesting that the road work has stopped. There were several reasons for the stoppage according to posters... one was that there was a huge archeological find en route and the other was that the earmarked $s were being moved to another road project to a new tourist Well said. I can understand the occasional tourist not speaking spanish, but it's something on the scale of a lesser crime when those who live here (or have come here for 9 consecutive years) don't speak more than 'cuanto cuesta' or 'Oso Negro por favor'. 				I can only tell you my experience in getting a Mexican driver's license in Puerto. You will need to go to the Transito del Estado office on 5 Norte (to the east of Avenida Oaxaca.) They are open from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. and from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. on Monday through Friday and from 9 a.m. to 12 p.m. on Saturdays. Take with you the following documents: Copy of the identification page of your passport Copy of the identification page of your FM3 or FM2 Copy of a comprobante de domicilio (proof of residency) e.g. electric bill, water bill, etc. You will also need to know your blood type. If you do not already know your blood type, you will need to go to a laboratory and have it tested before applying for your license. Studio for rent $3,500 usd, wireless internet,kitchen,dinning,1 bath,parking for 1 car. A block from Cabo Blanco Hotel and Marina.

				If the barking is consistent very night by the same dogs and not just every so often, try to identify the dogs that are barking or the houses where they live, take the information to the Tourist Police and they will probably be able to talk to the dog owners or look to see if the dogs have been left alone in house to fend for themselves. The same thing for stray dogs in the street, if it is the same dogs all the time the Tourist Police will have the dogs picked up by the county Cihuatlan, if ownership is not claimed the dogs will probably and unfortunately be killed. The noise situation after 10 or 11:00 (not sure which) can be reported to the Tourist Police and as long as it is not coming from events related to the ask at Hotel Flor de Maria. This is a call for cooks to enter their best efforts, to put the spoon where their mouth is...Show us your best chili or salsa, and get the prize for delivering it up in the best booth. You must register to enter (and donate three gallons of chili or one gallon of salsa) to be eligible for the glory...and the pretty good prize for first and second place. 				Here's an interesting related article, that also appeared in The News recently. < http://www.latimes.com/news/printedition/california/la-me-pelicans6-2009jan06,0,6717081.story > I made a comment earlier that I thought there were more pelicans in the Puerto area than I've seen before (11 years). Now I'm sure of it - no doubt. In the AM there are flocks flying generally west to east - way more than usual. In the early AM they are low over the ocean, taking advantage of "ground effect" (an aviation term). When the on-shore breeze picks up later in the AM, they are along the cliffs, taking advantage of the upslope winds. A few days ago we kayaked right next to a pelican, sitting/swimming in the ocean near El Faro. There was definitely something wrong with that pelican. Visually it

There are several turn-offs close together, and all but one will NOT take you to the beach! The one you want is the one that is closest to Melaque. 				Mazatman, I don't know your name and therefore cannot say I remember you. You are probably correct in that we have become a very close group...and I hope we can get closer and better at what we do. We try to introduce guests, and, what the heck??...a newcomer will usually feel sort of off to the side while the business or busyness of the meeting goes on... probably you nailed us on that one... many times, guests at the meeting are actually guests of members in their homes...thus intensifying the sense of community. We absolutely foster the group. Rotary International has four areas of concern for the clubs, and the cohesiveness of the local group is one of them. If you want to find out more, keep your head down...you're on the radar

Well I recently found out that if my pregnant wife is giving birth and that either her or the baby is going to die, then the husband decides who lives or who dies. NOT the wife! And apparently there are cases when the wife loses out. In response to the men are in charge in the house They wanted FM3, birth certificates, marriage certificate, power bill, and photos - Condo prices are not going down in Huatulco. People who are buying holiday and vacation homes are not nearly as affected by an economic downturn. If you are affected by it don't by a vacation home in Mexico! Spanish is spoken in Mexico - not Mexican. I would suggest learning as much as possible. Living here and not speaking any Spanish is challenging, especially when you go to buy household items, etc. English is generally spoken in the tourist areas, but it's not as wide spread as in other areas of Mexico (Riviera Maya, Puerto Vallarta, etc.)	2036

30105	12	Howard	Re: SIM Cards	You bettcha. No problem. Living in Huatulco is the most amazing lifestyle. As wayne said, do your homework and listen to someone like him, someone who has nothing but good HONEST advice, I too will answer any questions I can for you. We have been coming to huatulco for three years now and have just purchased our second condo. This is our first extended stay, this winter for 5 months..... There is always someone to talk to and things to do, a never ending stream of friends coming to check out this paradise. We love, love love it here. Our spanish is minimal, but we get by, lessons are the next step for us. There are good restaurants, and grocery and meat markets, you will be pleasantly suprised. Of I just got back from the cooking class. The enchiladas were delicious. Azucena makes the best salsa verde that I have ever eaten. See ya next Saturday. Is it at I should have added just a quick tid bit about buying houses vs condos..... As I said we are on our second condo, but did purchase land with the intention of building. After much observation it just seemed like a lot of hassle to build, or have a house here, especially when only here for half the year, and also having to deal with, or pay some one to take care of all the details in our absense. Condo fees seemed like a better alternative to us and we have everything taken care of in our absence. I know that some will dispute that but, Each to their own. We are finding in our complex of only 6 villas, we are mostly here by ourselves so There's one on a corner a few blocks towards the zocalo from Santo Domingo. Can't remember the exact location. They sell guitars, drums and Marshall amps, We rented a car last summer and paid the for the top insurance we could get here. Make sure you are covered, some if the drivers.....well you will see. It was great to have a car, especially to explore further afield, to Pto Escondido. and all the communities close by. There is also the option of hiring cabbies or tour guides with AC Suburbans for the day and this is also a great alternative and you also get the history of the area from them. There are many english speaking guides. If this is your first trip I would suggest a guide, we did it this There are many good things happening in this area and also some "things" which are not so good. The unnecessary noise level which keeps children, the elderly, sick people, most citizens the town, tourist and part time residents alike from getting a good night's rest is one of the problemss which we as a community are working toward alleviating. The Melaque, Villa Obregon and Barra the Navidad communities are actively working to keep the preventable noise level down in as much as possible. Yes, of course I would approach my neighbors first that is the logical approach to take in a situation like this, and if I could not reach them, I would bring the Tourist Police into the issue, they have "Frank makes sense", what a headline.....now we all know what happened His quote..."Red meat destroys your brain cells".....I guess he should know!!!! Better stay on those veges frank, god help us all, if you do anymore You got me at "superior soap". How's the TP? A bit last minute I know but to let any of you who didn't know that we have spaces still on our Morelia & Monarchs tour that leaves on Tuesday. The tour is 4 days, 3 nights and includes: Transport in 1st class bus Hotel (2 nights in Morelia and 1 night in Patzcuaro) Entry to El Rosario butterfly reserve Breakfast each day Entry to the ruins of Tzintzuntzan Tours of Morelia, Santa Clara del Cobre, Patzcuaro Packed lunch on the travelling days. If you are interested then Drew and Jenny both work for the school district so they have to take vacations around the times the schools are closed down for holidays. I think next year they might be able to work something out but not this year. They are also trying to sell a house. Not fun in this economic climate. I'll see you down at Surfo's in a few	861

				I think from memory, the cost of the car with the most insurance we could get was $8000 pesos for a week, we had a VW jetta. Unlimited mileage and it had to have a full tank of gas when returned. I will caution you to go over everything in the car with the rental company and note even the most smallest of scratches, etc on the contract. They tried to get very picky with me when I returned the car and found a scratch which they said was not there when we picked it up.....Something that you could hardly see. I managed to convince them that warm with bright sunshine and medium surf at 1000 Monday morning. Yesterday morning at 0730 while on my patrol I noticed as I past the rocks at the santa Fe that the tide seemed super high on Marinero beach. Waves were lapping up the beach 10-15 meters higher up the beach than usual. As I neared where the lagoon runs into the sea I saw that the Pacific had eroded the sand back and waves were going into the lagoon. Never seen that this time of year. It looked liked the entire Principal beach and Marinero had dropped about a meter or so into the sea. There was a verticle sand wall over a meter high, waves braking against it. What it says about YOU, is a great deal. The original post included nothing more than a simple request for information as to where one might be able to watch the inauguration ceremonies. Now, here's where it gets tricky; rather than running off at the mouth about your own insecurities, you could have simply named a PLACE where one might go to watch the inauguration ceremonies. I know the original question was a little cloudy, but, try it again Doc and see if you can come up with something other than that ridiculous crap about having to pretend you're You all have valid points. But, my point was in the long term, when you consider your property (villa or condo) will sit vacant for long periods of time. Then there are all the issues with maintainance and security. We are just considering the options, and renting for 3 or 4 months does seem to be cost effective and hassle free. I'm sure once you have found the place you like, the owners would love to OK Howard, Dry House, here is a real life puzzle for you. So I'm out fishing, enjoying myself, minding my own business and I come into the house to change my shirt that got a lot of fish guts on it. I walk into my bedroom and my wife is there with a friend and the friend apparently has been discussing what a wonderful job her plastic surgeon has done on her breasts. I do not say a word, just minding my own business getting a clean shirt. Suddenly my wife's friend asks my wife if it's OK to show me her "new" breasts. My wife is stunned into silence and so the friend whips them out and proceeds to tell me how wonderful they came out. I still don't say a word and after another minute or so I leave. Hey, that's the way it works guy. It comes with the territory. Considering your past occupation you should know that! What you need to do is find a way to enjoy the doghouse for the next few days. (And never bring the subject up. They look like white pelicans Howard. I saw a whole bunch of these over in Barra a couple of years ago in the bit of lagoon behind Villa Azul. We have been out with Jose Luis of the Blanquita (Santa Cruz marina) on four previous trips. This last trip, we had Lenguas de perros, molluscs with lime. Howard -- Are they white pelicans? Dr. Whitecoat advised me to comment later...after I considered it fully Yes - white pelicans.

				The Hacienda Hotel in Melaque is quite nice. I have never stayed there because I live in Barra but I have had clients stay there and just love it. David is a super host, the suites are spacious, nicely decorated and well appointed. They have a nice pretty new pool, ask them what happened to the old pool and they will show you some interesting photos, they also have tennis courts and a football (soccer) pitch. Rooster's restaurant - always a favorite - is on the grounds and the Herradura Market - biggest in Barra/Melaque - is right next door. CAD are easy to change here. When I went by the Casa de Cambio in Barra today they were just over $10 pesos to one CAD but Ken is correct that is not where you will get Christine is correct. On my last visit there , which was a while back, they had a large non fiction section but no novels in English so I am glad I will not have to rely on friends so much for new I have multi grain, wholewheat, french baguette and rye, fresh daily. Flavoured Hey, Ken... That was the perhaps the most unexpected of 'inauguration' parties last night. 100% music and 0% inauguration party, on this most historic of thanks scooter, i'll have to bring my racing helmet. I know there's a junkyard north of town. A local loco gringo here should be able Sorry I am no sure how this chat works lol Thanks for all You guys i got it ATM here I go lol.. May i ask for an other question?? We like to go to Ajijic from Melaque for a few days too..Should we take the bus from Bara or take a taxi from Melaque and what would be the cost for the taxi. I understand there is a bus going from Bara via Guadalajara airport. I wonder if it goes through Ajijic re: [b]May i ask for an other question?? [/b] Sure, but it might be helpful if you disclosed things like 1. How long are you gonna be here? 2. How many times have you been to Mexico? 3. What is drawing you to Ajijic and away from Hot and clear at 1300, a cessna 182 just dumped out three skydivers. On my beach patrol this morning I discovered that the tide appeared super high on Marinero, but Zicatela looked like it usually does. On principla beach the sand shelf is still there but not as prominent as the other morning. The lagoona is again sealed off, the other morning waves were filling it up. I noticed that the high water mark on marinero is much farther up the beach now, under the lifeguard stand and the 1st row of ramallas. Sice Zicatela appears the same, I can only conclude that most of marinero and principal beach slid off into the pacific. Several people told me that it happens here often, sand builds up, then thanks. We were at walmart in Manzanillo the other night and the market outside walmart has lots of artisans and fair prices from all over Mexico. Hi Buzardwest! 1 We just will stay this time four days as we fly out from Guadajahara to home! 2 I think this is our sixth time all over Mexico 3 Like to see Lago Chapala and Ajijic The wife don't like very high tempetures and humidity on the coast during summer month. including Melaque. We have been last time I was at the bookshop, by the municipal building in front of the sailfish, there were magazines and books ,in Spanish on archeology, quite a wide Thanks Evita, I will take a look there. Nope ... you have to taxi from the airport or bus station to Ajijic. Taxi is about $30us from airport and maybe same from bus. Taxi from here would be way The ocean ebbs & flows; AMAZING! Oh yes... I've been sick and didn't updated lately. Anyway tuesdays rock with Alf, friday Latin with Viuda de Romero are steady live music days at the Rockaway. We will be returning to Huatulco next week, and would like to spend 3 or 4 nights in San Augustinillo and/or Mazunte. Has anyone else done this? we are looking for beach cabana reccomendations, restaurants etc. Also, if we take the bus, will it go directly there, or do we go to Pochulata(sp) and cab it from there? Sooooooooooooooooo, you WILL be departing Melaque and not returning. If time is more valuable than money then a taxi/van might be the choice since Ajijic is off on a leg by itself ie, as Sparks said, not a direct route. I don't know the rates for taxi/vans from the area but you can save hours of travel by taking a car/taxi/van We've got sound! Thanks again to both of you. We used the man Sparks recommended--took it in on Monday and he told us to come back today. It was Very stoic at first but warms up fast. I've given him a broken TV and computer monitor which were beyond repair but he can use the parts. Glad it worked out Weeeeeeeell, just after the Sunset to be truthful. Never play on the same stage as a Sunset or a dog is my rule of thumb. Marco (guitar) Paulo (percussion) and Bonnie (vocals) at Sea Master starting just after sunset and going til 9 ish.... 2 long sets of rock, jazz, blues, and pop. Could be upstairs, could be down. If you come by and don't see it happening, push on up to the beautiful roof patio. Thanks for last week everybody! I really needed it to be a happy time with lots of dancing and laughter, and it was. I will especially remember the family from Brand new house - eclectic style, 3 bedrooms under construction ocean view. Evita, Commercial has also carried some fiction books in english. Last year the magazine shop closest to Commercial did as well, but doesn't have any this year. Ronycoca, I am glad spanish language books were okay. Since you didn't	1684

				Mexico Peso Gains Most in Almost a Week as Risk Appetite Rises By John Detrixhe Jan. 21 (Bloomberg) -- Mexico's peso rose the most in almost a week as appetite for riskier assets increased on speculation a U.S. bank-rescue plan from President Barack Obama will shore up financial companies. The peso gained 0.7 percent to 13.9236 per U.S. dollar at 1:35 p.m. New York time, from 14.0233 yesterday. "A little risk appetite is coming back," said Win Thin, senior foreign-exchange strategist at Brown Brothers Harriman & Co. in New York. "Equities are up a little bit, so that made for maybe a bit higher optimism." The yield on Mexico's 10 percent bond due December 2024 fell seven basis points, or 0.07 percentage point, to 7.7 percent, according to Banco Santander SA. 30539	12	CorGreive	Sunday art show at Maya's	New artists have arrived . Come and check them out ...Maya's 10am/2pm They do actually normally do a small Carnaval celebration here in Barra. It just isn't as big as it is in Autlan where they really paint the town for a number of days that are chock full of activities and festivities. Here while more low key there are normally some events in the Jardin in Barra. They always have a Carnaval Queen contest and a Foreign Queen contest and then there is the always favorite Rey Momo contest/event. There will be some stuff - just no word yet as to what or when. Fishing here does depend on ocean currents and water temperature (and phases of the moon). Sure the lots probably did not cost very much originally and the construction cost was probably around $30 a square foot, so the original owner probably had about no more than about $60 k in it, but in today's market it might move in the low $100 k range. Just a few blocks away a similar house might go for half that much. Trying to estimate replacement cost is tough because lots along the Barra canal are scarce now, and highly priced, and building tastes have changed (and increased). 				A wonderful dinner at el Jardin last evening, I had spageti with shrimp which was wonderful. Paula had the ravioli, shrimp and spinach which she said was the best she'd had in years. It sprinkled as we left or apartment so I took the truck, then of course it only sprinled a few seconds. Of course it never rains in PE in January, not real rain anyway. After dinner it was off to Rockaway for salsa music, a wonderful time dancing until the heavy clouds overhead let go with a heavy downpour about 2200. We'd parked at Shiva's and we got soaked	82

When you have a chance, can you stop by and drop some information at Villa Xochipilli. Address is Calle Hidalgo #85 villa I am confused here as to why the hostility towards realtors. Doesn't the marketplace set the price? Sure many realtors will give a seller a false expectation to get a listing but when the land doesn't sell the realtors reputation is hurt and either the land owner lowers the price or doesn't get a sale. Prices only go up if there is strong demand. Yes, some land owners will keep an unrealistic price for years hoping someone will be dumb enough to pay it but this land owner is not really that anxious to sell anyway. It seems to me that land like anything else is really worth what someone will pay for it; no more, no less.	1211

				Yes Zummie, you are confused, but then you just wrote an extremely eloquent paragraph based on your interpretation of what you read by others. Many potential clients come to Mexico, see a white face with blue eyes and feel that they are dealing with the same standards, AND they are comforted in those beliefs (and possible prejudices) by predators that say things like Tommy Wanker said to me "I'll do well here because I will not treat you like a Mexican realtor.....". That's exactly what these folks are saying in their "informercial." This, for me, has nothing to do with realtors per se, just those, as in any other profession, that play on fears and ignorance of the culture by using it to their Can anyone recommend a good massage therapist. The practice of standing raw cut lumber against a wall, generally won't get lumber to a moisture level acceptable over a long period of use and time. High humidity, improper sealing, unmatched wood and hundreds of variables that go into making paneled doors that last. I have watched it over the years on the Sunshine Coast of British Columbia. Every year when the summer sun comes out and the tourists start arriving, the realtors set out their most attractive lures hoping to snag a big one. The lures are free, just takes a little energy to go out and place them. Then they wait. If they get a bite they have all the skills and support to play it for all its worth, and once in a while they get a trophy catch. Appraisals, financing, second mortgage - no problem. My favorite are Repete, was the story in your reader perhaps about Volcan Paricutin, not Popo? Paricutin is in the state of Michoacan and did indeed emerge from surrounding fields. Fact, not legend. And a very interesting place to visit. The erupting volcano destroyed a few neighboring villages, and you can still see the steeple of one of the churches sticking out of the lava rock. I believe Paricutin was born Can anyone tell me what the road from Manzanillo to Puerto Vallarta is like? Is it safe, and how long would it take to drive it...Thank you for any help.	1674
30685	5	Farkem	Re: new restaurants	The road is two lanes, reasonably well paved for the most part, and as safe or safer than any other road in Mexico. We've driven it dozens of times with no problems. Like all driving in Mexico, don't drive at night. There is plenty of gas and a few towns along the way if you need to stop for some reason. It is about 3 1/2 hours or so if you don't stop along the way, although if you have time there I swam from El Faro to Manzanillo today. No doubt it's the clearest water I've ever seen in 11 years. I usually swim 100 meters or so offshore, and until today have never seen the bottom. Wife Debbie couldn't go with me, glad she hooked	122

				Good advice from KWC except if you drive like hell it is 1 hour from Manzanillo to Melaque then 4 hours to Puerto Vallarta. With slow traffic common as one nears PV and the road goes through the mountains, a total of 5 1/2 hours is more realistic. When leaving Melaque, there is a gas station just past the PV turnoff, on the free road up to Guadalajara. If you do not gas up there, then you will find only 2 Pemex stations along the road to PV and both of these are very

Later I looked up the story to use at one of my story-time sessions at the library where I worked. Sounds like I was born at the same time as Paricutin, LOL, so that could not have been the story in our grade five reader. I noticed the eco-tour but it is not available in the space we visit. Feb.2-20. Thanx for any info. absolutely no driving at night; even on toll roads. Police/Federals do not stop vehicles at night but hijackers do, imitating police. If you get stuck not knowing where to stop, stay in your vehicle at a Pemex Gas Station with the trucks. You won't get any sleep but the security guard is a welcome sight, a gratuity is appreciated. They, the truckers, are also parked there for a reason. The hijackers want your money and valuables. They will likely leave you with your Unless you crave excitement, don't drive at night.	2250

				Now it seems that Narco money keeps capitalism from collapsing altogether. Is this how the mexican Peso stays afloat these days? U.N. crime chief says drug money flowed into banks ReutersPublished: January 25, 2009 VIENNA: The United Nations' crime and drug watchdog has indications that money made in illicit drug trade has been used to keep banks afloat in the global financial crisis, its head was quoted as saying on Sunday. Vienna-based UNODC Executive Director Antonio Maria Costa said in an interview released by Austrian weekly Profil that drug money often became the only available capital when the crisis spiralled out of control last year. "In many instances, drug money is currently the only liquid investment capital," Costa was quoted as saying by Profil. "In the

				My wife & I usually stay at La Rotonda...it's in the centro historico and is walking distance to all the cool stuff. The hotel itself used to be one of those big houses which was later converted to a convent, and like all good convents, ultimately converted to a hotel. :) We usually ask for one of the rooms with a balcony overlooking the street, so there's a nice breeze always blowing in. The hotel itself is named after the nearby Plaza de La Rotonda, which is where you'll find I recently saw a restaurant in San Patricio with take-out Italian, but I didn't see the name. If I remember correctly it is on the street behind the main church. I Hot off the press.

Coldwell Banker and the owners are contributing to their workers as well as to the community in donations to sports and charities as well. I usually don't waste my time to reply to people who have nothing better to do than gossip and be negative when they don't know what they are talking about. Once in Morelia there are several tour companies going to see the butterflies. My advice is don't go to Sierra Cincua at the moment it is not as good as El Rosario. Also make sure the company you go with gives you lots of time in the park as it takes 3 hours to get there from Morelia and is a bit of a trek to the top, and it is at altitude (about 4400m above sea level). But it is worth every second a cihuatlan company just put up a sign nearby for a place that exaggerated the size of the property by 50%... pretty primitive RE practices here, and the big guys from the north may actually take advantage of some of the opportunities...i don't think there are any regulations on realtors here (please correct me if i'm wrong)... when there is money to be made, humankind has a very bad track record... i'd be more comfortable in the trust department if the company i was dealing with had something to lose...as i do in a deal...a realtor from coldwell banker can screw up here and then leave...maybe even sell the office...and life goes on as usual... up north, you realtors cannot pull the nasty little pranks that The funny thing is you don't need a Realestate agent to buy property here. 31020	5 Farkem	Re: Puerto Escondido to Huat	One of my favourite restaurants is Perla Flameante now located on the Rinconada. Fresh fish cooked in a variety of ways - amazing. We enjoyed fresh lobster as a main last night with oysters rockfeller as the appetizer (we requested the lobster a few days in advance) It was the best. Flor de Maria is always consistently good. We have checked out Danny's Terrance for lunch and dinner this year and have been impressed with the meals coming out of that kitchen. Los tios is a great spot for lunch. Martinez and Valerie Rota Jan. 30 (Bloomberg) -- The steepest decline in Mexico's peso in 13 years blindsided everyone from UBS AG economists to Gustavo Huitron, the local marketing manager for Mercedes-Benz. After weakening 20 percent last year, the currency fell to a record closing low of 14.2431 per dollar this week. RBS Greenwich Capital Markets in Greenwich, Connecticut, predicts another 5 percent drop by June 30. The peso's worst performance since 1995's so-called Tequila Crisis is being driven by the U.S. recession and falling oil prices, which are cutting Mexican exports and government revenues. Veto of Proposed Bank Policies July 10th, 1832 "Gentlemen of the Senate and House of Representatives: The present corporate body, denominated the president, directors, and company of the Bank of the United States, will have existed at the time this act is intended to take effect twenty years. It enjoys an exclusive privilege of banking under the authority of the General Government, a monopoly of its favor and support, and, as a necessary consequence, almost a monopoly of the foreign and domestic exchange. The powers, privileges, and favors bestowed upon it in the original charter, by increasing the value of the stock far above its par value, operated as a gratuity of many millions to the Real Estate Prices. Since I've been using this board for about 10 years, I would like first to post this disclaimer: This is just my experience. Others may have different experiences. One example of many: I have friends with a nice well cared for house for sale in the Bacocho area. The house has been for sale for a couple of years. This last year, 2008, the price increased by around $25,000. I have never seen prices decrease on anything in Puerto since I arrived in 2000. But again this is just my own experience, others may and probably do have different experiences. Land Prices One example: The price for one square meter of land in Bacocho was around $250-300p in 2004. 				Construction is progressing on all front. The Adoquin is all done except for the street light fixtures that are waist height which have no yet been turned on. It is very well done and the finishing touches are yet to be done but by all standards one would have to say that the objectives have been reached. On Zicatela, work is still progressing but it also is getting done and well. There are sidewalks on both sides , some parking well set off , some palmas and other malecon features installed. Construction is almost to the end of what had previously been paved on Zicatela. It would appear that the work has been well done as many days over the last two months we have observed cement testers , engineers at work I woke up with those bites. 				i'll be down to check that electrical work on the beach. what a great idea sidewalks on the beach.they should pave it right down to the water so we hadn't have to get sand on our tooties. and thanks for the new algonuin. people must be flocking to it for all their t-shirt needs. we have had a major icestorm here in the capitol of ky. my house and a neighbor got taken out by tree limb and it took 5 days because they get the major outages first. we have gas stove which saved us. and gas logs which i didn't bother with because i ran an extention cord to a i am not surprised that the aquario is a flop. that guy has too many fingers in too many pies. he should back taichi and the old little old lady staff from sukara. lets see margaritas, tugas, caracoles, i use to like the perla at the mall in the campground location but there is something about that old airport neighborhood. The main difference between road work in Latin America as opposed to same in Anglo America is that; in the former a dozen workers with shovels, working slowly in the hot sun, attempt to do what an expensive machine does in the latter, while a dozen workers stand around watching. Most of the road building machinery south of the border is very antiquated by our standards; & subject to frequent breakdowns. I'm sure this will draw the ire of many, but if Mexico had the money to throw at their projects that we do; they'd probably get things done quicker because of a superior work ethic. It might not be engineered as well, but with sufficient funds it would get finished much quicker than at present. PS, I'm my name is also omar and i can help you whats the problem?

Let's recap: the original "comparison" was between a couple of travelers, touists, foreigners (whatever you want to call them), & their experiences at or near the airports in DF & Vancouver BC. Their individual citizenship was never a concern to me; only that they were both visitors to the country in question. Also, unless you wish to call Mexico "a banana republic" (do you?),these are both "true democracies" which claim "due process". 				LOL! I have a little story which corroborates Mariel's account to some extent. I originally went to Puerto Escondido several times in the '70's before Huatulco even existed in it's current form. Wanting to show my wife the area about 7 years ago, we booked RT tickets to PE, with a week's stay first in PE followed by a week in Huatulco. When in Huatulco for the second of the two weeks, I went to the Mexicana office to see about returning from Huatulco to save the trip back to PE. I'd tried this from the states & they wanted an exhorbitant fee. So I figured if I could get it for $50/ ticket, it would be worth it. Total cost = ZERO! Now remember this is Mexico. I could go in there tomorrow, & it might very well be The second division website never returned after it went down for maintenance. 				ETN have always had some buses out of Barra, Cihuatlan, Manzanillo and Colima that stop at GDL (the Guad airport) on the way to the main Guad bus station (central camionera) in Tlaquepaque. The 7:20 am and the 12:45 am buses out of Barra both for sure stop at GDL. I have exited the ETN at GDL myself when flying to the east coast and also when visiting friends in Ajijic - the airport is closer for them to pick me up than is the Central. I just went next door to double check and the gals at ETN assure me that they can not pick passengers up at GDL. They can only drop off there. I personally recommend

He says he had a Jack Crevalle on for a few minutes this morning but his line was too light and it broke it. 				A Google search will give consistent answers. Here is one from answers.yahoo.com : The common belief among both cat and scorpion professionals is that cats are not immune to scorpion venom. So why don't more cats die from scorpion stings? There are a few reasons. 1. A scorpion will usually try to run away when it is in danger. 2. If a scorpion does sting, it may first inject "pre-venom", which is designed to be painful, but it's harmless and keeps from wasting the real thing. 3. A scorpion will deliver a potent sting right from the start if it is provoked or severely handled (like being stepped on by a human). A cat would probably not step on a scorpion 'by accident' and it wouldn't

				Hello all, I am meeting up with a couple dozen others down thataway, in August, for a couple of weeks. Those in charge are setting up a couple of adjacent rental homes in the Bacocho neighborhood, on the north side of the Carrizolillo bay. It's disconcerting to read Schultz' comment that sewage from that area goes "directly to the ocean", untreated. No, on 2nd thought, it's a ghastly concept. We had plans of going, with small children, swimming at C. Beach, taking long walks along Bacocho beach, etc. Am I just over-reacting here? Is that much sewage so quickly diluted by Mother Pacific, that it really does not matter? Is it incorrect that the development of Bacocho has occurred without proper sewage

				The dangerous highway project claimed its first major victim on Sunday about 11 a.m., when a mid-sized commuter bus ran off the road just south of Infragante, and overturned. Luckily, it rolled off on one of the least-dangerous sections, and not down the very dangerous embankments on the ocean-side of the highway, which drop off 20-30 feet in a half-dozen places. So it fell only about three feet, but enough to cause it to roll over onto its side. Traffic was temporarily halted on the highway, blocked off at both bridges, until the

Puerto Escondido, on a regular day, has no more problems with sewage in the water than say, San Diego or the Jersey shore, or Chicago. In fact, I would argue the water in Puerto Escondido is safer than any of those places aforementioned. I can't remember anybody in Puerto Escondido ever complaining of Industrial pollution, and yet it exists in those other places. How about toxic algae? Nope. I would also argue garbage in the water is no worse than those places. If anybody has specific knowledge otherwise, I'd like to hear it. 				I swim from Manzanillo to El Faro (lighthouse) and back, rarely on to Playa Principal, 4-5 times/week in Oct, Dec, Jan, April. I also swim between Carrizalillo and Manzanillo. There are no ocean currents at all, although wind can be an issue. It can come up rather quickly, bringing 1-2 foot chop and wind drift to deal with. Don't try and out guess the wind - you can usually see it coming from the bluffs above the ocean, but it can build quickly. Best time for the swim is after the downslope winds start to lay down, 9:00 am or so, and before the onshore winds pick up, typically about 10:30 - 11 am. Fins are a good idea - I always use them. And I always tow a yellow boogie board strapped to an ankle - sightability

				WOW!!!!-What a blast! We want to thank the Costalegre community for coming out and supporting this charity event. Below is a picture of the winning cooks. We also want to give special thanks to: *All the cooks who donated their time, energy, and the GREAT chili and salsas. *All the non-Rotarian volunteers who worked so long and hard to help make this event a success. *The musicians that donated their time to provide the great music: *Mike Nelson, Luis Davlia, Bill Hawk – played from 4 pm to 6 pm *The Redneck Mothers – played from 7 pm to 8 pm *Ballet Xalixco – great entertainment from 6 pm to 7 pm. and allowing us to use their sound equipment for the entire day. *El Jimador Tequila for donating all THIS IS A TEST. TESTING, TESTING. DID IT WORK?

				That was YOU who decided I was "wound to (sic) tight" Beachchair. Look, I'm not going to stop weighing in when I feel like people are giving bad advice or stating outright falsehoods. There're a lot of people who read this board looking for INFORMED opinions to help them decide about travel in Mexico. If I don't know about something, I don't chime in. But if I think it's a detrimental opinion, I'm going to speak up. No need to throw a hissy fit. Farkem & I disagree about the benefits of colloidal silver. I have teased him about it mercilessly, & yet he has the common sense to not take the bait. When I agree with him as I usually do on other matters, I come to his defense when he is attacked. That's what a I found Seashell down by the Seaside and her pictures down in the testy forum.

32012	12	Nan	Re: car rentals	Here in Melaque, I use a little store called Asturiana, near the Jardin. They have a reasonable selection of Argentinian and Chilean wines that are probably the best buy in this area. In addition, there's a small selection of French wines, at a much higher price. Watch these, as I suspect they've been on the shelf for quite a while. Believe it or not, WalMart in Manzanillo have quite a nice wine selection also. In a city the size of Manzanillo, there's probably a high-end wine store as I regularly buy B&G St Emilion, B&G Côtes du Rhône, Pouilly-Fuissé and some other wines I like in Barra, at Vinos y Licores Edu (Lalo's place) next to his Dad's Luna publications, right across the street from Ixtapa, around the corner from the bus stations. They didn't have any Pouilly-Fuissé last Monday though when I went there, they had a nice looking Chardonnay but I wasn't familiar with it so I took some red instead. They were out of the St Emilion and Côtes du Rhône	142

32152	12	Dry House	Re: Hotel Barra de Navidad	sounds like the original poster, david, should find a new place to stay... The Hotel Barra de Navidad sounds like a bummer...and might be for quite some We know it would be a daily challenge to turn this hotel into a profitable enterprise, but we believe it is very possible and we want the challenge. I have budgeted quite a bit for promotion, especially in the first couple years. We also know it will be a challenge to get folks there from the US and Canada because of the spotty air service, but we have some good ideas there too. This is not something we sketched out on a cocktail napkin at Piper's after a few tequilas. Many hours have gone into the preparation of our business plan and we have tried to address as many potential issues as possible. And we are not just a couple dreamers: we have the relevant experience and contacts to do this. I I certainly would not blame David for moving to another place. And having met Sr. Valencia and having heard the same stories from others, I certainly believe David's story, although I wonder what evidence he has that it was an inside job. Someone can easily come up from the beach and enter an unlocked patio door or even jimmy a lock quickly and get in. Once again, owners are not "taking care I brought my stuff down twice in a van in a strange collection of boxes. Once thru Baja and the other thru Nogales and nothing. If not packed to the rafters looking like an importer ... very few problems. If concerned ... make a list of low prices (use items) and present them only when asked an pay the toll. Tell them it is The owner will know very soon that you're posting here. One question. Why would you pay a finder's fee when you're obviously not a principal? I suspect the owners may not care to deal with you at all since you just slammed their hotel on I really don't care if the owner knows or not. I suspect if the price is to his liking, he won't care much what I say, money talks. And I suspect he knows he is not Mr. Popularity anyway and is not "taking care of business." He simply doesn't care and wants to get sell it. And paying a finders fee would be up to the investors themselves, really, akin to a real estate buyers commission. So perhaps I jumped the gun there, but I would think that someone who was brought an investment opportunity by someone else and decided to do it would Could we see some of your workups Paul? We have had both an attorney and accountant look at our projections of closing costs and fees and they both feel we are accurate. But I would sure like to hear the asking price as I have not yet seen a business there that offered any form of reasonable return on investment. Here in Florida none of the beach front hotels could re-sell as due to the seasonal occupancy none A 4 million dollar investment would need to produce at least $400,000.00 a year in net profits to even be looked at. But it is no secret the owner wants to sell and is not investing money or time into the place. I didn't have to tell you that, David did with the opening post of this thread. And from what I heard around town, this was not uncommon, as again, David said. I wish it were not so, I would like to buy a hotel where the owner was taking care of business, even if it meant paying more, as the guest base would be firmer. We want to give him a fair price. Believe it not, all you cynics out there, there are honest folks out there like us who aren't out to rip anyone off. We think we can give him a fair price, invest a good amount of I'm sorry that I didn't get back right away with the directions, but Don did a good zummie, I don't think you get a ten percent return, I estimate more like 6% average over the first five years, but I also believe there could be a substantial increase in the value of the property in ten years if it is made profitable. There is also the potential for an addition where the parking lot is, it appears, although we would of course have to check that out in the course of our due diligence. I'm sure we would offer an option and then look into all of these things before jumping in, that is usually how these things are done. If you are interested, I will paul...i guess i'm not used to thinking about somebody talking about what they will improve in my area...and at the same time telling me they have no financial stake in it as a developer/hustler... we all want better business, and i hope you Perhaps the machine was low on cash, that often happens on the week-end during the high season. 32167	12	paul falduto	Re: Hotel Barra de Navidad	Or maybe some problem with the international connection? Or maybe the peso We don't have a financial stake in the property because we have no money to invest. If I take out a developer fee, that is less money for the project, so I'm not doing that. I guess I'm just not a good "hustler" but all we really want to do is manage it because we both want to do it: we want to run a hotel and restaurant in Mexico and think this is a good one and the owner wants to sell it. And we put together an honest plan and are trying to get other honest folks to invest in that plan. Wow, imagine that! What will we get? We'll get salaries, some benefits and be living where we want and doing what we want. I'm sure we'll negotiate some performance bonuses or perhaps stock options, but when you have no money, I should add that although I may have been harsh with some of my opinions about how the owner is running the place, I saw no evidence he is not running an honest establishment or is not a good employer. A lot of the staff has been there quite a while, so he must be doing something right there. And again, he 6% would be a net profit of $240,000. per year. Given the room rates and the number of rooms at even 50% occupancy it can't happen. But it is an honest one and involves the purchase of a large asset, which will likely be more valuable whether we succeed in building up the business to the point of solid profitability or not, simply because we would invest a lot in renovation and would certainly increase business somewhat, although maybe not enough to satisfy investors. Also, did you consider the potential profit in food and beverage, which is zero now, as the restaurant is operated by others and there is no bar? We think this part of the business might be more profitable than the lodging part. Maybe we can't pull it off, maybe the economy will really tank and folks will stop You are quite welcome for that link Paul. 				In a past life I practiced law in an area called "securities compliance" wherein it was my primary job to keep small publicly traded companies kosher with the Securities and Exchange Commission. I met with the principals of many new upstarting companies and I also met a lot of venture capitalists. As part of my job I also did a lot of due diligence reports and wrote attorney opinion letters that were included in IPO's. Based on the factors I used to evaluate ventures I can tell you that your numbers don't work. It might have a chance at 1.3 million total and given the current state of the economy the hotel owner would probably take 1 million cash if it were offered (but then he might be one of the many Mexican if you go from Barra de Navidad to colima get the last entrance Tercer Anillo Periferico past the ugly monument and two blocks later straight to the right you will see Home Depot just before to the zentralia mall or Liverpool where the zummie, I should point out that when I estimated it a year ago, I did it in pesos at 40 million and converted to dollars. That was about $4 million back then, but it is only about $3 million today. So perhaps I should use that figure instead. If you were talking about just acquiring the business turn-key, changing nothing, you might get it for $1.5 million, although with high Mexican closing costs, it would more like $1.75 million total. But we want to put $500,000-750,000 in renovation and redecorating, and have enough for a good advertising campaign, several months working capital and contingencies. After the first day of classes I am thrilled and recommend any beginner (like myself) or more serious painters to contact La Paloma and see when he might be able to do another class. I will be starting a new beginner Spanish group on Saturday Feb. 21 ... time to be assigned. I have been offering Spanish classes in the this is a genetic condition and a large percentage of the population has it.and it was written about in a story here, about 5 or six years ago. this is the ideal sistuation for these machines. rich people would never use them. it is a a type of self employment. we just buy a garrafon and never give it a thought, but for margainal income people, isolated. this is a godsend. put dirty,(sorry no chemical pollution please test water first) kills all organic contaminants) but it is work to handle the water and learn to use it. it will service about 12-14 people. here on the coast maybe more if you do it 3 times a day. believe me itis work but these people want clean water for their families so much that they gather wood this is one of the few places to see a sunset in puerto. i recommend taking a little troublemaker along to make those margaritas as good as the view. i'm robert who. i am goig to be taking that bus from puerto to scdlc or maybe to tuxla gutierrez for a quick stop to see friends, then on to scdlc for the second leg of my trip. but then i am going to d.f. for my return. the route from scdlc to cancan Yesterday I saw a big banner in Santiago advertising a pro wrestling show coming this month, but I couldn't figure out where it's going to be. Anyway, as a means to an end, we used airmiles out of calgary and booked a package at an all inclusive the playa vista de oro. We had to do this because my wife had one week and we didn't want to spend it flying to pv and then busing down. This is our first time at an all inclusive. We didn't mind as we had our favorite places in the area and it was all good. The vista de oro caters to middle class (I think) mexican families. We really did enjoy it there. Others might not! 32667	12	Penny	What's happening to our pelicans	Strange things are afoot. The pelicans on the Melaque beach are dying, on average 4 a day. The Mexicans are burying them in the sand and it's so sad to see the mates of the dead birds by their side. Never in the 20 years I've been here have I seen so many birds for such a long period of time. They are on the beaches in groups of 10 to 30 strong and allowing people to walk through them. They seem wary to go into the sea and spend a lot of time flapping and cleaning their wings as if something is irritating them. 				Several folks have asked us why we aren't going to dance at the Carnival. I can only assume that it is in retaliation for trying to be punctual and they are still upset at us for not dancing last year. For those who don't know, last year at the Carnival, we arrived at 7:00 p.m. and at 8:00 p.m. we were dressed up and ready to dance as we had been scheduled by the organizers. Unfortunately, at 8:00 p.m. there was no music and the sound equipment was not working yet. There was another group scheduled to dance at 7 and as you can see, their timing was completely messed up!! 				Actually we pretty much stopped using that road a few years back due to the increase in traffic that resulted when that Infonavit sort of housing project (the one with the yellow one story semi detached row houses) was built down at the Aguacate end. Prior to that there were not many residences down there so traffic consisted of a few farm vehicles and not much else. With the extra traffic from the houses the road became not great for the bikes and really terrible for the horses. Then Bar de Gus opened and the botanero that was down in Aguacate by the housing project closed so we started using different off road routes for [i]Bikes, Beers and Botanas[/i]... Now we are mostly only on that road with the Yep - we're the best - don't serve ceviche either. Take the first right, and then the next right, going back down the hill. About a block before you reach the main street again, there is a blind alleyway to the right, the Asilo is at the end of the alley next to the carpentry shop. Visitors are always welcome. Whenever I stop in I try to bring a treat--gelatina, cookies, fruit, etc. (enough for around 24 people) But mainly they just will enjoy some conversation & a hug. Ask for Petra--she is the head employee and is usually there during the day. They have been doing some major improvements lately so the asilo is in much better shape than it was just a few	3625

Can we not just tonr r's recommendation of the liquados (smoothies) at Jugueria Vanessita is right on. I got introduced to it by several locals a long time ago. I go there at least 2-3 times/week when I'm in Puerto Escondido. Unfortunately, some I tell about it are hesitant about purified water/ice cubes/clean fruit, etc. at the Mercado, but I've had no problems at all, ever. Point to the fruit in the containers you want in your liquado (there are other out-of-season fruits in their freezer), or order off the menu. I always add granola, miel(honey), yoghurt, and ice(hielo) to mine. The regular size is a meal in itself (which is why I go there - healthy!), but I really enjoyed the class last Saturday. We learned to make a mole sauce. And I thought mole only came in a jar! Paco tells me that the next class will be on Friday at 1:15. He is looking for menu suggestions. Asucena is talented cook nice photos, DH. We walked them all - no problem - and lot of others worse than those. Just step briefly into the street and then hop back onto the sidewalk. Hopefully we are all aware that one of these charities is to raise money for underpriveleged children in this area, yet he implies that somehow this money should go toward the pelican problem. I'm left with the impression that the buzz is complaining that while watching the sunrise the other morning with my wife a very nice lady from minnesota came over and started talking to us. During the conversation she asked why Canadians have the Canadian flag plastered all over their cars trucks and trailers and wear hats and shirts with Canada on it. I didn't have the heart to tell her that we want people to know we are Canadians and not be mistaken for Americans. Canadians are well liked where ever they go and i don't know if that	1

32949	12 gitana	Re: garbage in San Patricio	Maybe the pelicans are getting sick because of the local water treatment plant is There are some local police who refuse to accept the offers of the corrupt majority. However these honest types are always kept at a low level and can never attain any recognition or power to change the overwhelming evil intent of the corrupt. They do exist but can do little if they like to keep their job.. or breathing. Naming any would be a harmfull disservice that could peril their lives. Local veteran or long timers do not fall in this catagory. No thanks to the ones I didn't dredge it up - it popped up yesterday after 3 months with someone who ate ceviche and then someone who did not want to be lumped in or something - I am amazed - it was a stupid thread (that's the thread that came after the original message - the original message is pretty benign advertising and we are a paid advertiser on TomZap and this is where he wants us to promote). However, the sense of powerlessness you feel in being able to do something to change the situation has created tension and blaming; a common response to a situation when the solutions are not within easy reach and we all want the pain to subside. Maybe the solution requires a strategy and consistent force. What is the governing body to address this matter? Where are they. Who has the authority to deal with this? Yes - there are a lot of trip hazards and sometimes we have to step down into the street to by-pass them. We've gotten used to it. I just see no reason why some people have to walk in the MIDDLE of the street, in a line of 3 or 4 or Kenny, don't sweat the small stuff - he's probably just jealous that Angelica's restaurant is such a success. 33023	12	BonnieGibson	NO Live Music Tonight at Sea	It's funny because when we walk around Angelica is always saying - watch out , car coming. Since she grew up here she knows that the norm in Mexico is that a pedestrian customarily gives the right of way to the vehicle. So, just as a caution, the average local driver will not yield to a pedestrian and walking in the streets (especially Taco Row) can increase the chances of getting hurt. The driver will expect the pedestrian to do what is the custom and stop and let the vehicle go by and not challenge the right of way - that as that is a Mexican I would suggest contacting a US insurance agent specializing in health insurance to see if there is a product that caters to US nationals living abroad. This would include medical evac back to US for extreme circumstances. If you Google "expat health insurance" you'll find information. Checking with AARP might be smart, and looking at magazines catering to US nationals teaching English abroad. Another option might be keeping your US health insurance in force with a very high deductible. Keep a US mailing address on the policy and pay the premium automatically. Once you've lived abroad more than 6 months it becomes impossible to get coverage in the US if you choose to return. But if you already have it in force you'd be fine. You might also consider contacting a Getting worse peso hit over 15 at some banks breaking presidential law. 33046	12	buzzardwest	Re: SIDEWALK TRAINING 1C	I think I have this correct. In most of residential Mexico, houses were built to open onto the street. Sidewalks simply did not exist. That tradition has continued where sidewalks do exist. They are not community property. They belong to the property owner. That is why many families set up a living area on the sidewalk in front of their homes. It is essentially their patio. Walking along any sidewalk in the Melaque area brings that reality to life. That is why the property line may result in an elevation change of feet, not just inches. I took a series of photographs on my last visit to illustrate the point to my neighbors who complain I hate to keep this thread alive but as to your challenge, it looks like you've edited out your comments starting with the gringo references on the original post (edited on the 23rd) and then at least a couple others yesterday. 				I am certain this topic has been discussed before, but I cannot find an answer to it on the message board. I want to bring as many documents south with me that I may need for official purposes. I know that certain documents require an apostille. As an example, IMSS requires birth certificates to have an apostille. (And I think my birth certificate is the only document that will require an apostille. I am not married -- and very happy, thank you very much -- so I do not have any of the other governmental social licenses.) Here is the question. Do government agencies keep the apostille? Or do they merely keep a copy? In essence, if I am going through the apostille process, should I get more than one for my birth

				< http://www.npr.org/templates/story/story.php?storyId=101215537 > NPR has a good report on this this morning. Is it accurate? Well, with the recent history of the government credibility I suppose it is anybody's guess. At least there is some evidence in the article. The reality is that Mexico is in a very tenuous position. There are a lot of people returning from the U.S. because they cannot find jobs. These people need income in Mexico which is difficult at best. And they are not sending a huge amount of money back to their families every week/month. That is/will be a large strain in the economy also. 				This is one of the first books published in Mexico around 1871 by Teófilo Pedroza a native from Sayula and it started as a joke.. El ánima de Sayula de Teófilo Pedroza This funny tale written in verse , tells the joke played by two friends : Apolonio decides to meet with his friend at midnight with a ghost that would offer him money in exchange of a certain kind of services..But the ghost turns out to be a very alive, intelligent and sexually active queer(haha) that is looking for a live creature to satisfy his lustful desires. In many different cultures a lot of similar ghost tales are found in that the ghost covers the attitudes that are considered antisocial or banned by society. It is not strange that this tale had	1838

Why? Under the Communications Decency Act or "CDA", 47 U.S.C. § 230 if a forum board owner exercises control by deleting and removing posts he puts himself in the position of a publisher and can then be held liable for defamatory posts. If the forum board owner just provides the venue but does not exercise control by removing posts the board is then just considered a bulletin board and the owner has no liability for any defamatory posts. The key for the owner is NOT to put himself in the position of a newspaper publisher by asserting control over content. Probably better to make links to the site rather than an executable file. Northern Baja, which has a similar climate and beauty as So Cal, was relatively cheap by comparison. Many projects were being developed for ocean close properties. But in the back of many investors minds were those who lost their retirement homes in Punta Banda, south of Ensenada, in the late 90s. The Trump property(really in the south part of Tijuana though billed as Northern Baja), is closer than most of the other developments to the U.S. Border, and seemed a safer investment because it came with the Trump name. I have a trailer that has specially installed clamps for the front forks that I use to haul up to eight bikes in and I also have a hitch rack for three bikes. So I couldn't use it with either of those things attached to the Jeep anyway. I can get all eight of my saddles and the rest of my tack for the horses in the back of the jeep and I wouldn't put them outside on a rack anyway. Too many dangly bits. Most insurance companies outside of Mexico do not cover in Mexico. You will also have to get the liability coverage which is around $13- $15.00 U.S. per day. They will add on a 10% airport fee tax, and then add on a airport service fee of approx $524pesos. Then they will add all of these costs up and then charge you an additional 15% tax on top of all of the "charges" Almost everyone tries to fight all the extra costs, but you will never win. You just have to accept that renting a $13 dollar a day car will cost you $544 pesos per day, or $36 dollars U.S. per day.	2157

If the fact that the $13,000 US lots don't [i]"overflow"[/i] - which I am guessing means flood - is significant does that mean McCloud has knowledge that the $30,000 lots do flood? What does [i]"very little fill need to start building"[/i] from resident1's post mean in that case? How much is very little? Very little compared to what? If flooding is not a problem as resident1 posted while I was writing this - hence the edit - why is fill needed? Buzzard also makes a good point. 				I think Piedras Negras / Eagle Pass is right on the route to Austin and it's the fastest road up from Saltillo and away from the more crime ridden border areas. Again, if you have any immigration or car paper issues to deal with, look at my notes on the post above. One driving option: it's a 1 day drive from Puerto through Acapulco to a mid-sized town below Toluca called Ixtapan de la Sal highway 55. It's a traditional hot springs resort area. Drive through town on the main road to the divided tree lined street to find nicer places to stay and then my number is Barra de Navidad home # 315 355 8488 or cell #314-11 or Alberta cell 780 715 8045. The group was doing nothing illegal. This country has 400 years of letting things pass, at least publicly. Confrontation can easily lead to actions that we, coming from a different culture, cannot image. So if you find my comments hurtful rather than helpful, It's a tough decision for Republicans who they'd like to see in the Whitehouse from their side. Picture the three ring circus the extended Palin family would represent. How about Rush Limbaugh the misogynist & current defacto leader of the party? Or perhaps Michael Steele the confused RNC head? 				Here's a semi-serious answer for you. We are intending, like you, to spend a fair amount of time in Barra after our retirement, which will be in a couple of years. We have a place there, also like yourselves. We have spent as long as 5 weeks there at a time as sort of a primer to see what we would do with our time, and to judge if 6 months or so would be ok with us. We are very active people back here in the US, skiing, mountain biking, hiking, waterskiing, road bike riding, you name it, so we were curious about boredom setting in. We have a couple of cruiser bikes down there, as well as a couple of surfboards, and are taking down and inflatable double kayak this year. We spent our month there walking on the I've sorta held back from posting because I've been freezing here. Where is this global warming happening? Not here in Alberta. Anyhow a couple of more things I thought I would throw out. From people posting here and having been in manz before the buses are an excellent way to travel. Besides the huge amount of walking we did we also used the buses A lot! I noticed that the drivers would make change for the locals. Sometimes they had to stand there and wait but they would get it. I always made sure that I had correct change and rode for 4 pesos each (cheap) anywhere. I thought I would try something one day and gave the driver 10 pesos for my wife and I and wanted to see if he would give You can walk across the overhead walkway then take a city bus to the central camionera for 5 pesos. 				Buyers sue Trump over failed Mexico condo project Mar 14, 12:43 AM (ET) By ELLIOT SPAGAT SAN DIEGO (AP) - Donald Trump was sued Friday by buyers who lost millions of dollars in deposits on a failed hotel-condo in the Mexican border city of Tijuana. The 69 buyers purchased 71 units in Trump Ocean Resort Baja and paid deposits totaling between $18 million and $20 million, said Bart Ring, their attorney. Buyers were told last month that the luxury oceanfront project was being scrapped and that there was no money left to refund deposits. In December, they were told the project had only $556,000 left after collecting $32.2 million in buyer deposits. The 197-page complaint filed in Los Angeles Doesn't sound like my kind of guy, buzzard, but thanks anyway. Anyone buying real estate in either the US or Mexico should have their own real estate agent, a member of the National Association of Realtors (NAR) or Asociación Mexicana de Profesionales Inmobiliarios (AMPI), or preferably both, as those are trade associations which demand a higher level of ethical responsibility of their members. In the US, the seller usually compensates such buyers agent by way of a commission split with the listing agent, but ultimately, it is the buyers repsonsibility and the agent represents only the buyer in the transaction. This is especially important in Mexico as there are no real estate licensing laws. That means you pay them, of course, and considering that closing costs are much higher than here, "soft" costs of buying in Mexico are much higher than here and buyers need to get good estimates of such from their attorney and/or agent. If you doing a commercial transaction, you need one more "A Team" member, actually a "double A", an accountant who is also an auditor, that is, one who can file the monthly tax and labor reports required by the government. That Paul, you have no idea about real estate in Mexico as you have just proven with the blather that you offer here. 				Of course you can skip some steps, but every one you do exposes you to more risk. It is your choice. I will say that of all the ones you can do without, the agent is number 1, especially if you have already located the property you want to buy. But then I would have a good real estate attorney to draw up and/or review all contracts and documents and do all due diligence, in addition to the Notario that is. If you are buying in a new development with fixed prices, an appraisal might not be necessary, either, although I'd want one. I'd also want my own architect to

				The Ejido papers we have basically say that they have judged (ruled) that these lots are for your use. Transfer fees and taxes paid the Ejido are based on lot size with or without a house. The only difference between these and an early 1990's Ejido agreement is the older one required you to build a house within two years or they could take it back. That was probably "original issue" of the re: [b]writes a separate document to protect the buyer from such circumstances.[/b] And what would that document be that will hold up against a citizen that has a legal claim to the property and its improvements. Even if there are no survivors, the property will remain Ejido. I know and understand that there are many in the situation that you describe, but this thread was initiated to show that no matter what paperwork and good intentions were provided initially, no matter what due diligence is suggested by Paul and others, there is only one way that comes close to what we, foreigners from the other side, think of as Our garage sale to support the Asilo de Ancianos as well as the Spay & Neuter clinic was a huge success. We spent more money this year on The Ballet Folklorico Xalisco, buying costume material and labor to make dresses. The group has over 60 children in the Barra area that practice three times each week at the jardin. Armond Herra and his wife Erica recieved the donation that will pay for dresses, hats, boots, more hats, etc. as they build their costume closet for the children who cannot afford their own. Armond is a nice guy, but he is strict with the children. He requires they stay in school and get reasonable grades if they This thread has really taken a life of it's own. In the 37 comments there is not one that verifies this story. No restaurant has been named, so no way to check the facts. Were they really French Canadians or French speaking people ? We were the only ones there, and we just sat there and watched them wake up and have them fly all over us. We stayed in Angangueo, a small little town which is trying to rebuild itself. The owner of the Alcatras hotel took us up and waited 4 hours for us to come down. Ate at Simons restaurant and it was just a great experience. We have our own car so After a bout of rather nasty bronchitis I'm happy to say I'm up and running again, as is the Deli. 				Thank you for your comments, Terry. I stated that I was going to let this go, but you have raised some valid questions, that deserve answers. For starters, it's probably late enough in the season that I won't harm the business or reputation to now name the restaurant, who were, in no way to blame. The ugly incident occurred in the (terrific) Concha del Mar. The waiter on duty was Andreas. The group was French Canadian...I have lived all my life in close proximity, and can recognise a French Canadian accent. Additionally, one of the group was wearing a Quebec flag T-shirt. Further, amongst their screams was one "Vivre Le Quebec Libre", closely followed by the "English go home." Definitely a lot of ill-

34478	12	danpatman	Re: Happy St. Patrick's Day	Villa Obregon is actually short for Alvaro Obregon an ex-president of Mexico. http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/%C3%81lvaro_Obreg%C3%B3n With as many San Something towns as there are in Latin America I assume the towns founder had a favorite saint. The Saint Patrick's Battalion (Spanish: Batallón de San Patricio) was a unit of several hundred immigrants and expatriates of European descent and fought as part of the Mexican Army against the United States in the Mexican-American War of 1846 to 1848. Many of the battalion's members deserted or defected from the U.S. Army. Primarily made up of Irish and German immigrants, the battalion also included Canadians. Yes, Alvaro Obregon was born into a poor farming family in 1880 - about 32 years after the incident of the Irish Brigade. You can have a look at this page: http://vivasancarlos.com/patrick.html Or, here is a quote from it - While the brave soldiers of Saint Patrick's Battalion are not particularly well-known outside Mexico, it is clear that their god-like status in Mexico is enough to compensate for the attention they failed to receive in other countries. There is still a fond memory of "Los Colorados" the red-headed Irishmen who gave their lives in the struggle for Mexican sovereignty. There are Irish names in prominent places - if you can recognize them. There's "O'Brien City," for instance, better known as I have also heard it said that the name Melaque is a corruption of the English or Irish word "malarky". This seems a bit far fetched to me and I would be interested if anyone has edifying comments on the origin of the name Melaque.	283

[b]Sunday, March 22[/b] [u]Angels of the Street (Ángeles de la Calle)[/u] A group of street artists including pantomime, circus artists and street theatre Time: 18:00 hours at the Expanada del Pez Vela (main garden in Manzanillo Centro) [u]Folkloric Ballet [/u] A traditional dance from the state of Colima. This year celebrates 40 years of this dance troupe under the direction of Maestro Manuel Hernandez Luna. Time: 20:00 hours at the Expanada del Pez Vela (main garden in Manzanillo Centro) [b]Monday, March 23[/b] We had the chance to stay at Casa de Marco last February since Nan has made the apartments available for daily rental instead of weekly only. The place is immaculate!!! The kitchen and bathroom were big and very nice. I mention the kitchen and bathroom because these are two rooms that are normally small in Mexico. The whole apartment is spacious and neatly decorated. And you can expect a good night sleep. The grounds are neatly kept with a cascading waterfall into the pool. We had a BBQ one night since there is a grill and bar area with a frig. In addition, the best service for the laptop was at Casa de

In the hotels I stay at, I frequently wind up talking politics-both Mexican & American- with the staff. Since I date back to Gustavo Diaz Ordaz, & Louis Echeverria who were in power before many of the people I'm talking with were even born, my opinion is given some respect because I was actually there. The same for when Kennedy was killed, since many older Mexicans really loved him & still have pictures of him in their houses. I'm always wondering after I tell IE to do something if it is really going to do it. Right click, open in a new tab, opens it in the background while you continue reading the rest of the present page. You can grab a tab and move it to another position, that is to the right or the left. So it allows you to put some order to your tabs while you are searching. Where you normally type in an address, you can put in a list of words to do a search. You don't have to move to a different box. It also has an incognito function, it doesn't show up in your history, etc., if that's important to you. 34616	12	buzzardwest	Re: circus in Barra today	This one is located at the entrance to Barra My husband and I have had the privilege of living in Melaque for just about three months and every day we have seen something new and interesting. We have had the opportunity to discover new areas by bus for a very affordable price. The tours offered have been very worthwhile. Each restaurant has its own unique atmosphere even though they are some similar foods. The owners seem to be making sure there meals are presented in a pleasant way and offer their specialties at a special price. Of course, I do not believe we could hit every restaurant in this city but we sure have been in many and yes we do have our favourites. Melaque's residents could not have been kinder or more helpful. We have also just used Omar. He is such a nice guy and speaks great English.	1211

Enjoy your journey The circus which I recommended, los Chuchines, left Barra several days ago. I saw their trailers as they were leaving. Unless they have returned, the circus that is there now is not the same one, so do not use my previous info about them. If the signs say, "los Chuchines" and "los 5 Magnificos", it is the same one, but it is a curious google of Mundo Mojado finds this: http://oaxaca.es.craigslist.com.mx/reo/1061419521.html By the pictures from the link, looks like a large place, nice views. Price seems a little low for property, but Upon installing Chrome, Firefox or Opera, they ask you if you want setup to import your bookmarks (Favorites) and if so, from which one if you have more than one browser installed. Alex installed a pre final verion of IE8, not unusual to find problems there with something. I didn't go to IE8 because it is normally a catchup version. Trying to catch up with what the other guys have recently done. And if you are going to have problems with an installation, I will always put my money on the MS product. The one and only time I ran IE was to get to the Mozilla download page. The very next thing I did was uninstall IE. If you run both the difficulties may be coming from IE updates that are designed specifically to conflict with other browsers. Get rid of it if you can. I always accept the updates from Mozilla and have never had any difficulty viewing pages ever. Try the updates and then browse your problem sites from Firefox again. Mozilla has taken great strides in dealing with sites that were designed for viewing in IE only. I spent a couple of days on VISTA when my daughter bought a new PC. YUCK. She says now she wishes she had listened this topic has become a test of the of this medium as a place to find the news.

				We used the buses a lot when we were in manzanillo. Just for someone's first time, you can ride the buses up and down the coast if you make sure that "miramar" is painted on the front window. I'm sure some that live there have other ways of telling which bus to catch. Anyhow, we didn't have time this time around but next year I think it would be fun to catch a bus with "valle" (correct?) painted in the window. That bus is sure to take you into the eastern part of that Rod: It was a screw up with editing - I tried to change the mis-spelling and posted it twice. No matter, I will edit away the problem.

				I want to give recognition to a great hospital not only on the medical side but the humane side as well! Last week as some of You know I was injured from my knee..Could barely walk so I had my father taken me to melaque's health care center from which I was mistreated and sent to Cihuatlan's hospital from which I also was sent back to Melaque's again. I knew it was something serious so I tried Jaluco's health care and the doctor saw my condition and sent me to Cihuatlan ..Finally I guess the doctor saw She could not get the materials she needed and due to the seriousness of my condition I was sent that very evening

				Aztec mythology Nahual In Aztec mythology, a Nahual was a sort of guardian angel that manifested itself in the form of an animal. Each person had a nahual who watched over and protected them. You receive a different nahual depending on which day you were born. Then your parents keep this from you until they believe you are mature enough to know. They do this because many times the person resembles their nahual animal. For example, a bull is mean, so if the child's nahual is a bull then he would use it to their advantage, and act mean to everyone to get what they want. You are not supposed to tell anyone

An hrs. north, I went to a vet in Tomatlan and the assistant had a little report card and ticked off a few things and stamped it with the business name. We weren't too sure about that so on the way back stopped into Morelos and the vet's wife drove up to the ranch and received the signature of the vet on the report card. Worked for my daughter. With that and your current up to date papers that you already have from 2008 should do it. No need for the current health certificate when driving. We enjoy the local buses too, never had any problems except the odd whoops, wrong route. The "Valle" route in Manzanillo actually does not leave the developed area. It circulates from Las Hadas on Santiago peninsula down the main road south to Sorianna, then "inland" to the road that goes to the bus station, auditorium, then to Las Brisas, to Navy base, and then turns around to reverse the route. There appear to be at least three or four buses on this route which takes about an hour for the full loop, so you may have to wait 20 minutes On our last visit we went with friend to a great seaside reaturant in a nearby town, north I beleive from Melque...I of course was not driving but busy saying "Hail Mary" in my head that we got there in one peice..funny, I only seem to do	3693

34907	12 zummie	Re: Up for a sunset swim?	I look across Tampa Bay and see the City of St. Petersburg in the distance. The big low building on the left side is the enclosure over Tropicana Field. I drove a '80 Subaru GL to Baja in '91 and a '90 Loyale to Puerto twice since 2000. We never had many mechanical problems, though we did get a muffler once and needed brake pads in Huatulco. They couldn't get Subaru parts (at least not quickly), so in the way of Mexican mechanics they took the worn shoes and a set of similar Nissan shoes to a machinist and had him attach the wear surfaces from the Nissans to the metal plate of the Sub's. I never knew how they were attached, and meant to replace them but forgot about it till they needed replacing again a few years later. Worked fine. I also heard a story after the Baja trip (to the July '91 solar eclipse) of a woman from L.A. throwing two small kids I think you would be asking for trouble. Although Subaru now has a small presence in Mexico, your 10 year old model would never have been sold here. So no parts would be available. Bringing parts in from the US would be prohibitively expensive and time consuming. My advice is to bring a car that is I had the reverse view next to the Coast Guard base south of the airfield. What did they replace/remove to build Tropicana Field - the airfield? Only one or two Could it have been Martin's in La Manzanilla? There would have been some indigenous clothing and comals, coffee, and honey, etc. for sale on the ground floor. AND the ceasar salad would have been made beside your table, possibly I've been working with Derek Tompkins, and am very satisfied. His house is the big yellow one you see up the hill from the the intersection of the highway and the road angling down to the point. Or write him at: christinederek@yahoo.com. He has been great both in design (working from my ideas which I worked up in an inexpensive home design software package) and execution, as he has worked with my builder to make my needs become reality, within the budget Sparks I have only been here since 1999 so I couldn't tell you. I do know the Coast Guard still has a big base in St. Pete. You can see the skyline a little better in this one	1131
34908	5 djland	Re: Subaru In Mexico	Looked through the main index and couldn't find anything. Does anyone know what the going % rate is for a 12 mo. cert. of deposit and which is the best bank Sell the Subaru for whatever you can get and buy something in Puerto. Maybe an old taxi. Maybe something better with more money. Anything would be better 1993 FORD ECONOVAN DIAMOND EDITION, LEATHER SEATS, ELECTRIC BED, MEXCAN PLATES, $ 5000.00 CANADIAN DOLLARS, CAN BE VIEWED 1993 FORD ECONOLINE DIAMOND EDITION TRAVEL VAN,(MEXICAN PLATES) LEATHER SEATS, ELECTRIC BED, 5000.00 CANADIAN DOLLORS Thanks to Google maps I see the stadium is back 15 blocks or so from the water ... close to the old baseball field. 275 highway is new ... used to be only 19. We have been in Melaque from January until April 1st. We have freinds that are going to come nest winter for a few weeks. Any avavilability in February or Taxes for importation have gone up substantially. check the aduana section of Thanks for all the replies! We will take the US vet paperwork and the dog to the vet near Ava's (been there to buy Frontline for the cats) and get the certificate. Nan, we're going back with p/up truck AND trailer, so the carrier is not needed	1302

The chocolate version is Champurrado, other versions are flavored with fruits or nuts. This version is sweetened with piloncillo (Mexican unrefined brown sugar), cinnamon (canela), and vanilla bean. Serves: 5 -6 I N G R E D I E N T S 1/2 cup fresh masa (corn dough) or 1/2 cup masa flour (masa harina) mixed with a 1/4 cup hot water to blend 5 cups water 3 - 4 tablespoons piloncillo, chopped or 1/4 cup brown sugar plus 2 teaspoons molasses 1 stick cinnamon (canela) 1 vanilla bean (split lengthwise) Optional, about 1 cup fresh strawberries or pineapple chunks I N S T R U C T I O N S Place the water and the masa into the jar of a blender and Hi, we are building right next door. Actually that it was just a shell for over 20 years I guess, a half built hotel, and now a group from Calgary, Canada purchased it and I believe it will be 30 time share condos. We are actually tomorrow to PA for a couple of weeks. It sounds like construction is going slow. Luckily, we have perched our house so that we are not looking directly at it and I do still have 4 suites available in Casa de Marco for next February and I have 6 for March still available. The prices are on the site. Prices vary by suite and by Very nice Zummie and the good news is that it looks go incredibly inviting the entire crew have decided to have the next tomzap party right there in your pool. Won't Mrs. Zummie just be thrilled at that! Now get some beer chilling in the Just got the call from my wife who's still on the beach down there in Melaque. The 7 Peso especial is OVER. Beers are now 20 pesos! Unless it's half price	1838

				Last month I was in Melaque with an hour to kill in the afternoon while waiting for a veterinary health certificate so we walked down to the beach and searched and searched (sorry Lou) for a place to buy a [b][i]good[i]/[b] cold beer but all we could find was Sol and Dos XX. Even the little place I used to go to across from the old Bigotes no longer sold Estrella or Pacifico. After a few blocks of searching we determined that there was no Estrella or Pacifico to be found anywhere. I made myself so thirsty tromping around Melaque in my search for a
